Premiers and Ministers Say Time for Yielding Has Not Arrived.

The Foreign Situation.

The premiers and foreign ministers of Britain and France decided, in a meeting at London, that the time has not come to grant Germany political or territorial concessions.

Anxiety lest China's open door be slammed shut prompted the United States State Department to insist that Japan talk things over with this nation before altering the maritime customs service to China.—Page 14.

Reich Aims Denied.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 29.—The premiers and foreign ministers of Britain and France today decided in a "successful" eight-hour discussion of major world problems that the time has not come to grant any German political or territorial demands.

French Premier Camille Chautemps said the British and French ministers were in "full solidarity" in their search for peace. "We made a tour of the world," he said as he left Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's official residence.

The diplomats appeared pleased with their first day's work and authorized this official five-point account of the conference:

1. France fully understood the limited scope of Lord Halifax's exploratory talk with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and agreed with Britain it fulfilled its purpose;

2. The ministers discussed the colonial question in all its aspects and agreed it required further examination;

3. Both governments expressed themselves as concerned for preservation of peace in Central Europe and discussed Germany's ambitions there;

4. They also expressed their appreciation of the "seriousness" of the Chinese-Japanese war and their "need for vigilance" to safeguard their interests;

5. They pronounced non-intervention the right policy in the Spanish Civil War.

The ministers were understood to have dwelt seriously on French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos' coming tour of France's Eastern and Central European allies.

Informed sources said the two nations had declared their desire to co-operate with all nations but needed a great deal more preparation before a detailed plan could be drafted.

Tokyo Will Recognize Franco Rule Tomorrow

Tokyo (Tuesday), Novfl 30 (U.P.).—The Cabinet decided today to extend formal recognition tomorrow to the Spanish rebel regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco as a result of Italian recognition of Manchukuo.

Italy, Germany and several smaller countries have already recognized Franco's government.

Master at Cards Declares Fact They Do Not 'Explode Inhibitions' Is 'Tragic,' Whatever That Means.

Mrs. Culbertson's Bridge Column—Page 26.

Do you fight with your wife over bridge? If so, your married life always will be happy.

That's what Ely Culbertson said last night at the opening of the National Bridge Tournament at the Shoreham Hotel. He admits that he and Mrs. Culbertson are not exponents of his theory.

"The only tragic thing about our married life is that we don't quarrel over bridge. There I am willing to bow to Mrs. Culbertson's superiority as coauthor of the Culbertson system."

(Mrs. Culbertson, who writes bridge for The Post, did not come to Washington as she had planned for months. It was announced yesterday that she was remaining at home under physicians orders. However, later friends in New York said she had left for California by boat and that her trip included a stay in Nevada.)

For couples who don't have a system, however, Culbertson prescribes bigger and better bridge fights. "They release inhibitions caused by the hundreds of petty annoyances that accumulate in the course of daily married life. A bridge fight is

Five Convicted, Seven Gaming Penalties Fixed

Floratos and Four Others Found Guilty; All Freed on Bond.

In two smashing blows at Washington's alleged gambling clique, five men were convicted of violating the District's gaming laws, and seven others, previously convicted, were given stiff sentences by Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Court yesterday.

The jury deliberated less than half an hour in finding Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos guilty of violating the gaming laws, together with four of his alleged henchmen, Vincent A. Marino, Bernard Newyahr, John A. Clements and Bennie W. Traub.

Within a few minutes after the jury had reported that verdict, Justice Adkins, after listening to arguments which were aimed at obtaining leniency for the seven men convicted in a prior raid, pronounced sentence on all seven. In both cases he permitted the men to remain at liberty on bond, holding there was a serious doubt as to material constitutional factors.

Carroll P. (Nubby) Nuckols, Moe Morganstein, Robert E. Murray, Lawrence F. Pisani, Anthony T. Costello, Harry C. Adams and George W. Godfrey were those sentenced. Pisani, only 22, was given the lightest sentence, his term being from 6 to 18 months. All others received a sentence of from nine months to three years.

Raids on the Floratos establishment in the 900 block of Ninth street northwest, and on the Nuckols establishment on upper Fourteenth street northwest, were engineered by picked police squads and deputy marshals at the same hour. Within a few days police made some 65 raids and arrested approximately 250 persons, following a raid on the place in the Albee Building where race track information was allegedly being disseminated via special telephone wires.

Arrests Break CIO Mass Drive In Jersey City

Police Jail 13 Organizers and Escort Scores Out of Town.

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 29.—Police halted summarily today the C. I. O.'s first attempt at mass unionization here by arresting 13 persons who participated in the labor drive.

William J. Carney, C. I. O. regional director who organized the "showdown campaign" in New Jersey's second largest city, has charged workers had been "terrorized" and intimidated by the "police of Mayor (I-Am-the-Law) Hague."

Seven of the C. I. O. organizers and sympathizers were given five-day jail terms on charges of violating a city ordinance against distributing leaflets. The six others, charged with unlawful assembly, were held for the Hudson County

Pitt Team Wants $100-$200 Apiece For Rose Bowl Trip

Pittsburgh, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Post-Gazette said tonight the Pitt football players went "on a modified sit-down strike" in rejecting a possible bid to the Rose Bowl.

The paper said it learned the players demandad:

1. A cash consideration for pocket money—between $100 and $200.

2. The entire squad of approximately 60 players be taken instead of a traveling squad of about half that number.

3. An immediate vacation of two weeks.

AFL Spurns Truce, Insists Pact Be Final

C. I. O. Offer Is Turned Down Unanimously by 3 Negotiators.

Deadlock Is Expected Today as Result of Rejection.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

The American Federation of Labor last night rejected a proposal by the Committee for Industrial Organization for partial truce in their civil war, on ground that no agreement of any kind would be acceptable except final and full peace.

The rejection was unanimously indorsed at a private meeting of the A. F. L. negotiating committee of three, which had previously met for three hours with a 10-man C. I. O. delegation.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Federation committee, had informed Philip Murray, head of the C. I. O. negotiators, that the proposal was not acceptable during the joint conference.

New Deadlock Seen.

However, Murray requested Harrison to re-examine the suggestion in a special meeting. The three A. F. L. delegates conferred again and decided to stand on their refusal to go along.

It was indicated today's resumption of peace parleys would be deadlocked as result of the rejection.

The C. I. O. proposal, submitted secretly yesterday, was not made public, however, but it was learned authoritatively that it provided:

1. That the federation committee agree—in writing—to granting of industrial union charters and accede to the John L. Lewis organization theories in the mass production, maritime, and certain minor industries, including newspaper editorial work and furriers.

2. That the C. I. O. would, in return, agree to rejoin the Federation and work out a schedule of harmony in other industries. However, the Lewis forces stood pat on their demand that their membership be formed into an autonomous department within the A. F. L. and that the constitution of the Federation be amended, striking out many of the powers of the executive council.

A. F. of L. Stands Pat.

The A. F. of L. committee, refusing such action, again offered to allow 12 C. I. O. unions once affiliated with the federation to rejoin the A. F. of L. without restriction and dispose of 20 other Lewis unions later.

C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis, in a speech before a unity conference of furniture workers called by the C. I. O. in what appeared to be a raid on the federation's upholsterers' union, caustically referred to the Federation as being a standard for innocuousness and "too virtuous."

At the same time he was sharply critical of the Roosevelt Administration and "its failure to find an answer to the Nation's economic problems." He called on the workingmen to "organize and become articulate and obtain the right to work when they want to and not when Walter Chrysler or Henry Ford want them to."

He warned the Nation is entering "another economic tailspin" and exhorted workers to band behind the C. I. O. to preserve their jobs "because it is a matter of life and death to those being thrown out." He demanded that Congress "cease milling around."

British House Laughs, but Speeds Bill to Quiz Nation's Wives on Reasons for Fewer Babies

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 29.—Humorist A. P. Herbert plunged the sedate House of Commons into gales of laughter today in an attack on the government's "Nosey Parker" bill—designed to find out why Britain is not producing more babies.

HERBERT.

Herbert recommended "holidays with pay by the sea," as a remedy.

Other members joined the humorist in ridiculing Sir Kingsley Wood's population statistics bill which the opposition labeled "an insult to the nation's women."

The measure reportedly would give the government broad liberties in prying into family confidences.

"I am a grandfather," Herbert declared. "I think I have ceased to breed. But no one is going to ask me about that until I die."

Herbert also recited one of his own compositions, two lines of which were:

"And everybody wondered why the population fell."

Wood argued that his bill would not attempt more than the regular 1941 census would reveal, but said the matter was "too urgent" to await the census.

He asserted the present population decline, if continued, would reduce Britain's 44,000,000 population to 5,000,000 in 100 years.

The house advanced the bill a second step by a vote of 197 to 125 over the opposition which called it the "Nosey Parker" bill.

Though origin of the nickname was obscure, opponents said meaning would be clear when British housewives started slamming doors in the faces of such census agents.

Senate Finance Head Pledges Self to Seek Revision.

Most Corporations Wronged, He Holds

Indorses Action Quickly as Is Possible in 'Orderly Manner.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Pledging expeditious action to modify capital gains and undivided profits taxes, Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee last night called both levies a "mistake" that should be "acknowledged and corrected."

Harrison said the two taxes have "unjustly penalized" most corporations and have reached a point of diminishing returns to the Government itself. He said they have contributed to business "fear and uncertainty."

Not an Overnight Job.

Then he promised to exert his own efforts to modify the two taxes as quickly "as orderly and rational consideration will permit." He said Congress is alive to the need for prompt action, and "the country must not expect us to be swept off our feet and complete this task overnight."

The Finance Committee chairman spoke over a National Broadcasting Co. network as legislative counsel for the House Ways and Means Committee began writing into bill form business tax changes already agreed to by the House tax sub-committee.

Chairman Fred M. Vinson explained that schedule drafting may take some time and reiterated that tax legislation cannot be expected before the "early days of next session." Harrison said in his speech that the "Senate is powerless to take any action upon these tax measures until they have first been acted on by the House."

Conferences Continue.

Meantime, there were reliable indications that the House sub-committee may report to the full Ways and Means Committee before the start of next session, to permit possible tax hearings before the committee in December. In one quarter it was said that such a report could not be made for two weeks, at earliest, and in no case is House action contemplated in the special session.

Speaker Bankhead told reporters tax revision may come "earlier than is now anticipated." The Speaker said he would "love to see a bill pass tomorrow," but declared there was "ample" time to act before tax returns come due March 15.

Cold water spilled on the Senate's "immediate action" drive by Senate Majority Leader Barkley failed to halt conferences among Senators still seeking means of modifying the tax this session. Oral stimulus to the drive is expected to be supplied during farm bill debate this week.

Senator Harrison told his radio audience last night that the undivided profits tax and capital gains levy not only have adversely affected revenues but in his opinion "have retarded industrial progress

U. S. Asked to Help Railroads Meet 'Worst Financial Crisis'

I.C.C. Opens Hearing on Plea for 15% Increase in Freight Rates on Commodities and Boost in Eastern Passenger Coach Fares.

By Sidney Olson.

The major railroads of the country asked the help of the Government yesterday in meeting "the worst financial crisis in their history"—in the words of President J. J. Pelley of the Association of American Railroads.

The petition of the railroads to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to boost freight and passenger rates brought hundreds of lawyers, among them some of the highest-paid legal counsel in the Nation, to pack the great red-draped oak-paneled I. C. C. hearing room into a "standing-room-only" state.

Two witnesses, Pelley and Dr. Julius H. Parmelee, association economist, set forth the basis of the railroads' appeal for "adequate revenues."

"Billion Dollar Customer."

Pelley declared the railroads could supply industry and employment with their "greatest single stimulus" if rates were hiked sufficiently to restore the carriers to their places as "a billion-dollar-a-year customer" of all industry.

Parmelee traced the need for a freight-rate increase to "pinching" of railroads between "declining levels of freight and passenger rates on one hand and rising prices, higher wages and mounting taxes on the other hand."

Early Decision Urged.

"This is the only way out of a very critical situation," said Pelley. "The railroads are completing their seventh consecutive lean year.

"Ninety-six railroads are in the hands of receivers or trustees, 36 of them Class I railroads operating 70,000 miles. Other systems are threatened with bankruptcy."

For these reasons Pelley urged an I. C. C. decision "as early as may be consistent with the importance of the issues involved" on the rails' application for:

A 15 per cent increase in freight rates on all commodities except coal, coke, lumber, fruits, vegetables and sugar, for which certain maxima are asked.

An increase in coach fares on Eastern district railroads from the present 2 cents a mile rate to 2½ cents.

Before the witnesses were heard, Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison, presiding, suggested to shippers and other interests opposing the petition that they organize a steering committee to consolidate their opposition.

He pointed out that "vast numbers of counsel are present," and urged opponents to agree on one counsel for cross-examination to

Perjury Trial Arena of Row On Jail Laxity

Witness Admits Signing 'Life Story' Revealing Beer, Dope Supply.

Heated words flew at the perjury trial of Ted Creech in District Court yesterday after a statement purporting to be the "life story" of Richard C. Tackett, principal Government witness, recounted dope buying and beer drinking episodes in the recent Senate investigation of coal mining conditions in "bloody Harlan" County, Ky.

Allegedly a signed story of his life written for a New York newspaper, the typewritten statement was introduced by the defense to show that Tackett reputedly obtained marijuana cigarettes and beer while supposedly confined in the District Jail in the Senate inquiry.

Under cross-examination by Defense Attorney William E. Leahy, however, Tackett said he "supposed" he signed the statement while in the Harlan County Jail following the Congressional hear-

Cold and Fair Spell Forecast for D. C.

Fair skies and continued cold today will follow yesterday's drop in temperature of 30 degrees from several days of balmy weather, the Weather Bureau predicted yesterday. From freezing early this morning to something like 45 degrees this afternoon was expected.

Yesterday's low was 30 degrees at 7 a. m., rising to a high of 49 degrees at 4 p. m. A wind rising to 39 miles an hour shortly after midnight added nothing to comfort.

Cold weather here was attributed to a storm along the Atlantic Coast, whose fringe enveloped Washington. Variable weather of the past few days was shrugged off as something normal for November in these parts.

Enoch Arden of World War Finds Wife Divorced, Re-Wed

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 29.—An Enoch Arden of a long disbanded Army came back from war today and found the bride he left behind had divorced him, remarried and was the mother of a 17-year old son by her second husband.

The bewildered veteran, Hallie Daigh, 39, said he had heard nothing about his former wife since shortly after he bade her farewell at San Antonio, Tex., 20 years ago, to go to France with the Seventh Field Artillery.

Hallie Daigh was reported missing. Actually he passed the final year of the war in a German prison camp and was in a hospital for months after that.

"Then, I reckon, I just wandered around, not knowing particularly what I was doing," he said.

A structural steel worker, he plied his trade as he could. His travels brought him, finally, to Springfield, where Daigh learned the other half of his story.

"I'll probably pull out tomorrow," he said. "Where to, I don't know."

President Suggests Major Changes in Laws Governing FHA.

U. S. Would Insure Loans Up to 90%

Vandenberg, Copeland and Business Leaders Applaud Message.

Text of Message—Page 6.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Sharply assailing rising costs of construction, President Roosevelt yesterday proposed to Congress a housing program to be undertaken by private enterprise which he visualized as resulting in from $12,000,000,000 to $16,000,000,000 of residential building over the next five years.

In a message which called for major changes in the Federal Housing Administration insurance act, Mr. Roosevelt pressed the recently disclosed desire of his Administration to reduce prices in the housing field. This he proposed to bring about through making large-scale housing projects possible, and in a series of conferences with leaders of the building industry and of labor.

$50,000,000 Held Ready.

The President, as forecast one week ago in The Washington Post, indicated he meant business by announcing that he already had instructed the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to hold in readiness $50,000,000 for organizatior of one or more national mortgage associations, should private capital fail to take advantage of the proposed changes in the insurance law.

In an effort to assist workers in low income groups to undertake home ownership, Mr. Roosevelt proposed a relaxation of the present provisions of the insurance law in order that homes costing not more than $6,000 might be bought with a 10 per cent down payment.

This was one of nine major changes in the FHA insurance law proposed by the President which immediately won widespread acclaim on Capitol Hill and from the leaders of the building material industries. Bills carrying out the President's proposals were introduced in the Senate by Senator Robert F. Wagner and in the House by Representative Henry B. Steagall.

Many Groups Approve.

These two men are chairmen of the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees, respectively, the committees which will consider the bills. Steagall last night called his group to commence hearings at 10:30 a. m. today, with FHA Administrator Stewart MacDonald and Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of the Federal Reserve System, as first witnesses. Wagner's committee likewise will meet today to decide what procedure will be followed in considering the measure.

Meanwhile, the President's program won praise from such Republicans as Senator Arthur Vandenburg and from such conservative Democrats as Senator Royal S. Copeland. Spokesmen for the building trades likewise expressed enthusiasm and willingness to co-operate with the President in the forthcoming conferences which he will call.

Clarence M. Woolley, chairman of the board of the American Radiator and Standard Sanitary Corporation, was reported by the Associated Press as saying in New York that the building and construction industry "a veritable charter of new life and vitality for an erstwhile dormant section of the business world."

He declared the Roosevelt program provided "all the financial mechanisms essential for a widespread and sustained revival of

'Moving Blindly' in That Direction, He States in Monopoly Talk.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—Attorney General Homer S. Cummings wound up a talk on monopoly today with the assertion that "nothing is more obvious than the fact that big business . . . is moving blindly but with accumulating acceleration down the road leading to ultimate Government supervision."

"Indeed," he said in an address to the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America, "there are those who are persuaded that economic groups that in one way or another have arrived at a position of dominance in any essential line of activity are likely candidates for regulatory treatment—and that this is especially true with reference to so-called natural monopolies or lines of business dealing with national resources.

"The problem has been so long with us that unless it is frankly considered and firmly grasped, it will get quite beyond control and lead to remedies of a character that few really desire."

Antitrust Study Needed.

A thorough re-examination of antitrust laws is "imperatively required," Cummings said, as the body of law founded upon the subject of monopoly "is at once difficult to understand and well-nigh impossible of practical application in many of the urgent situations of modern times."

". . . The antitrust laws need clarification and restatement," he said. "They need behind them the drive of adequately financed enforcement machinery. . . ."

"Naturally, I deprecate a slapdash approach to the subject. In my judgment, there should not only be serious study but extensive hearings, so that every interested element of our national life may be represented and so that it may not be contended that any legitimate considerations have been ignored. Adequate consideration of the matter must of necessity cover a wide range of inquiry which should touch such subjects as mergers, holding companies, financial control, Federal incorporation or licensing, base-point bidding, price leaders, identical bids, patents and taxation. It should run the whole gamut of our national life. . . ."

Several Points to Study.

"We should determine how far wrongful intent is to be considered as a criterion when actual restraint of trade has been shown and whether the so-called "rule of reason" requires redefinition. We should consider whether we are chiefly concerned with the form of competitive practices or whether the accent is to be placed on the control of the supply and price of the product with the resulting mastery of the market.

"A sinister intent is difficult to establish, whereas an economic result stares one in the face. The establishment of rebuttable presumptions, within reasonable limits, would tend to relieve the Government of many almost insupportable burdens in the matter of affirmative proof that now has to be drawn from reluctant or adverse witnesses.

"Monopolistic practices could undoubtedly be more clearly defined.

"No doubt, in rewriting the antitrust laws, thought should be devoted not only to strengthening them and making them more intelligible, but attention should also be given to provide protection and encouragement to legitimate efforts of enlightened business men to increase production and employment, to improve working conditions, to eliminate waste, to provide more effective methods of distribution, and to supply better services to consumers and to the public. Nor should we overlook the fact that recalcitrant minority groups may, by ill-considered methods impair or destroy the orderly conduct of business, with incidental injury to labor and to the public. The word 'chiseler' has in modern times come to have a very definite meaning."

'Quarterback' Turns From Air Game to Line-Bucks in Housing Message.

By Franklyn Waltman

SINCE President Roosevelt, in April, 1933, compared himself to a quarterback in a football game who swiftly shifts his tactics to gain ground as events develop, that analogy may now be employed without offense to point up an analysis of the present New Deal course. Mr. Roosevelt first used that analogy, it will be recalled, in explanation of his overnight shift from the orthodox course of the first six weeks of his Administration to the radical and reckless experimentation which gave us NRA, AAA, monetary tinkering and huge pump-priming.

WALTMAN.

Continuing our analogy, it might be said that in the latter part of April, 1933, Mr. Roosevelt abandoned bucking the line and end runs in favor of a forward-passing, aerial attack—with some pretty fancy triple passes. He sent such heavyweights as Oliver M. W. Sprague, Dean Acheson and Lewis Douglas to the showers in favor of halfbacks devoted to raising prices and increasing costs through the triple NRA-AAA-monetary tinkering pass.

Most of the spectators were enchanted and lustily yelled their approval, especially as the team commenced making huge gains. Nothing like it had ever been seen. But a few said it was against the rules—that in a triple pass the ball could be thrown forward only once but that the quarterback was throwing it forward two, three and even four times in each play.

When the umpire agreed, the quarterback started to kick him off the field. But the spectators did not particularly like that and those who did not cry out in protest kept silent. So the quarterback let the umpire remain on the field and undertook to restrict his aerial plays to the required number of lateral passes.

But the quarterback soon found out that he was not gaining ground. His halfbacks were making beautiful passes and lengthy runs—but they were all across the field or behind the lines with net losses. Then it commenced to rain and the field got muddy—and the spectators became frightened and commenced murmuring about the quarterback ruining everything. So the quarterback, who likes to be popular, shifted his tactics and commenced calling for plays bucking the line, like "balance the budget," "reduce prices," "give private enterprise a chance." Of course, none knows when the quarterback will go back to a few underhanded passes.

The analogy, despite its facetious nature, is sufficiently accurate to illustrate the New Deal course. In all seriousness, none can now doubt that President Roosevelt in recent weeks has shifted his tactics—indeed, has reversed them. If his attitude on abandoning pump priming and his apparent determination to balance the budget—with his caution in monetary affairs—were not sufficient indication of his change of course, his housing message yesterday would be conclusive evidence.

The real significance of that message is written between the lines in those parts where Mr. Roosevelt assailed the high costs of material and labor which have prevailed in the construction industry. By emphasizing low costs and volume brought about by large-scale operations, Mr. Roosevelt does a right-about-face from his attitude since the spring of 1933, when all emphasis was placed on increasing prices and restricting production—not exactly in housing itself but in the things with which houses are built. Again, the message is important because it marks the first time that Mr. Roosevelt has made a realistic effort to encourage private enterprise to perform the housing job.

His past efforts chiefly have been devoted to government subsidizing of housing—and that was not unnatural, since the subsidy method becomes plausible when the government is actively engaged in building stilts under other forms of industrial and agricultural activity.

The program which President Roosevelt sent to Capitol Hill yesterday, remembering that the emphasis on the need for lower costs is a major part of it, was not improvised as a panacea for the industrial recession now afflicting the country. It is true that the program was refined and perfected in the last month and that the industrial recession won for it the President's espousal.

But that program in its essential elements has gathered dust around Washington for three years and was discussed avidly a year before it was formulated. It was formulated by a group which in 1933 recognized the hard fact that building costs were too high to sustain a recovery in housing construction. But they were buffeted about and ignored—if not worse—as the President followed such will o' the wisps as NRA and pump-priming until he was aroused by the slump in residential building early last summer and the subsequent industrial recession.

Prof. Sprague in the fall of 1933 seriously urged on the President the course in regard to the housing problem which he is now following. But Mr. Roosevelt at the moment was more interested in the gold theories of the expert on hen-laying, Prof. Warren. Moreover, at that moment the NRA and pump priming looked good. The umpire had not yet started to enforce the rules. So Prof. Sprague resigned.

But his ideas—as good ideas will—lived on after his official demise. In 1934 they were taken up and agitated by two men who have had more to do with the formulation of this program than any others—but whose participation is virtually unknown. They were J. M. Daiger, one-time assistant to Marriner S. Eccles, and now financial adviser to the FHA, and Winfield W. Riefler, former chairman of the Central Statistical Board. As attaches of the National Emergency Council, they fought for this program in 1934, but without avail.

Mr. Riefler, out of a long experience in the Federal Reserve System and as economic adviser to the National Emergency Council, drafted much of the present FHA insurance law, and ideas he had in 1934 are incorporated in the present program. Mr. Daiger, as assistant to Frank C. Walker, NEC chairman, worked along with Mr. Riefler.

But it was no use. The New Deal course was against them. NRA code authorities were fighting to maintain, if not to raise, prices in the building trades industry. The PWA pump-primer was going full blast, ready to pay, with Treasury funds, whatever rate organized labor made the prevailing wage of a community so that labor was scornful of pleas for rate reductions for building craftsmen. Those are points to which the President does not now allude when complaining of high prices.

Mr. Riefler left the Administration in 1935 to take a post with Princeton. Mr. Daiger went with FHA and continued to hammer away at his contentions, finally winning the ear and support of Mr. Eccles. This spring the Merriam group, of which Commissioner of Labor Statistics Isador Lubin is the economic adviser, became interested. Then came the slump in building, followed by the industrial recession.

Peace Gesture Made by Farm, Labor Groups

House Blocs Trade Overtures; 31 Signatures Needed on Wage Plea.

Peace overtures were exchanged yesterday between leaders of farm and labor blocs in the House as both crop control and wages and hours measures encountered threatening opposition.

Coincident with a desperate leadership drive for action this session on the wages and hours bill, Chairman Marvin Jones, of the Agriculture Committee, signed the wages bill discharge petition.

The conciliatory gesture followed a lengthy conference with Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Labor Committee, who must get the petition fully signed by Saturday at the latest, if the measure is to be considered this session by the House.

Jones reserved the right to vote as he pleases when and if the bill comes to a vote. His signing brought signatures to a net of 187, still 31 shy of the number needed to force action December 13. Mrs. Norton was "hopeful" other farm bill supporters would sign today.

Grange Opposes Bill.

Both pivotal special session measures encountered opposition, as the House opened debate on its modified farm bill, and the Senate moved slowly through the fourth day of debate on a more drastic version of the Administration's No. 1 bill.

The National Grange, the National Co-operative Council and the National Co-operative Milk Producers' Federation, in a letter to House members, called for defeat of the wages and hours bill in "the best interests of labor, agriculture and the country."

Nearly 100 members of the House, meeting at the call of Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, considered a resolution sending the farm bill back to committee, and urging stipulated minimum prices on various farm products. Action was postponed until Thursday.

Other Developments.

Other developments were:

H. R. Tolley, AAA farm administrator, appealed for "moderation" in enactment of a farm bill. In a radio speech from Chicago, Tolley said marketing quotas should be self-imposed by farmers only when normal supplies are running over. He said "compulsion" should be limited to penalties on sales over such quotas.

Representative Jones told reporters marketing quotas under his measure could go into effect next year on only two commodities—tobacco and rice. The Administration has sought to make the program fully effective in 1938.

Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, appealed to the Senate for enactment of the strongly compulsory cotton section of the Senate bill to prevent "disastrous fluctuations" in the price of cotton which he said were "threatening foreclosures all over the South."

Indications from both sides of the Capitol that the cost of the farm program, so far as this session is concerned, may be limited to the present $500,000,000 cost of the existing soil conservation act. Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee said no taxes to finance the program are contemplated unless and until it is known the costs will be increased.

Meantime, House Whip Pat Boland called a meeting of assistant House whips for this morning in a last-ditch drive to collect signatures necessary to discharge the Rules Committee from the deadlocked wages-and-hours bill.

Both Boland and Mrs. Norton hoped to profit from an attempted union of farm and urban forces co-operatively seeking action on both measures. Support for the wages bill has come from the big cities, while rural members, of course, are the farm bill's chief sponsors. Mrs. Norton denied a "trade" was in progress, but admitted she sought co-operative action. Among Southern members signing the discharge petition yesterday were Jones, Ramspeck, of Georgia, and Umstead, of North Carolina.

Jones Defends Measure.

But from another Southern member, Representative Fuller, of Arkansas, came a bitter denunciation of the wages measure as "nothing more or less than NRA" that would set up "autocratic dictation" over farmers, laborers, small merchants and industries.

On the farm front in the House, Representative Jones defended his crop control bill from the first flurry of floor opposition. The Texan said he personally had favored small processing taxes to finance the program but the committee decided otherwise. He said although the bill provided only the regular soil conservation benefit payments it would further permit "any other payments for which money can be provided." Then he urged members to remember the "basic philosophy" of the bill in presenting amendments—"the farmers' right to an offset to the tariff."

"I hope they will not go off after extreme measures that would either overlook our farm production altogether, or go to the other extreme and overlook the price altogether," Jones added.

He said any effort to "jack" the price of a commodity too high would end in loss of foreign markets and substitution of competing domestic commodities.

Opposing the farm draft, Representative Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), Wisconsin, said the bill would establish a bureaucracy costing $50,000,000 to administer and take out of production 30,000,000 wealth-producing acres. Representative August H. Andresen (Republican), Wisconsin, protested "compulsory" features of the bill that invoke penalties on over-quota sales once the program is approved by a farm referendum. He said "farmers and farm organizations don't want it."

On Capitol Hill

Garner and Senators to Be Guffey's Guests on Pennsylvania Deer Hunt Tomorrow.

DELIGHTS OF DEER HUNTING in Pennsylvania will be afforded Vice President Garner, several Senators and Count Jerzy Potocki, Ambassador of Poland to the United States, when they are guests tomorrow of Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania. The party will leave today for deer-hunting areas in the central part of the State, the exact site to be determined today.

DAVE SATTERFIELD, of Richmond, Virginia's new representative, followed his predecessor today as a member of the House Judiciary Committee. Satterfield was named to take the place of the late Representative Andrew J. Montague, of the Third Virginia District, whom he succeeded in the House.

FARM BILL ECHOES:

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the committee that drafted the "ever-normal granary" proposal, shouted on the floor "it is not what I wanted. It's what the majority of farmers demanded. If it succeeds, I'm going to congratulate them. If it does not, I'm going to say 'don't shake your gory locks at me.' The men whose hands hold the plow and the hoe say this is what they want."

An ancient method of trading—barter—has found its counterpart in modern methods of disposing of cotton surpluses, Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, told the Senate. Brazil, the Senator said he was informed, has traded a portion of its surplus cotton to Italy for a submarine.

Distribution of huge quantities of wheat, corn and cotton to the needy was proposed in a resolution by Representative Hampton P. Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina. He recommended purchase of 500,000 bales of low grade cotton, 35,000,000 bushels of wheat and 25,000,000 bushels of corn on the open market to be turned over to the Red Cross or other relief organizations for distribution.

RETURN HERE of Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, was further delayed by removal of four abscessed teeth. He has been in a Baltimore hospital since the special session opened. His office said the teeth were removed in an effort to alleviate a sinus ailment.

"A GOOD DEAL of political unrest" in Peurto Rico was reported by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, on his return yesterday from the islands.

Walsh attributed the "unrest" to "considerable agitation for a new form of government."

"Different groups are advocating different methods of administering the government of the island," he said.

Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said he had visited Puerto Rico to study the question of the kind of legislation to be enacted next year by Congress for governing the island.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN Congressmen approved at a conference resolutions urging the President to continue silver purchases and demanding protection of States' rights over their own water in proposed regional planning legislation.

The Westerners authorized Representative J. Will Robinson (Democrat), Utah, to draft the silver resolution after agreeing the program was "essential to the prosperity of the West."

Bandits Kidnap D. C. Clerk, Rob Him of $300

Hal Taylor, 20-year-old Sanitary Grocery Co. clerk, was "kidnaped" and robbed of $300 in a holdup shortly after noon yesterday.

On his way to a bank at North Capitol and H streets northwest, only a few doors from the store where he worked, Taylor said he was startled by a voice from behind him which said:

Get into the car and don't say a word or I'll shoot you dead."

Taylor said he turned around and saw a young white man with his hand in his pocket as if the pocket contained a gun.

Forced into a car parked at the curb, Taylor said he was held in the back seat with a gun trained on him while the car was driven by another man to a spot on Pennsylvania avenue southeast at the District Line.

"Listen," Taylor quoted the gunman, "this is where you get out. And keep your back turned or I'll shoot you."

The man took a paper bag which contained the money—the day's receipts of the store located at 85 H street northwest—and sped away into Maryland.

Taylor reported the robbery to First Precinct police and gave them a description of the bandits. Both men, he said, were between 25 and 30 years old and both wore dark overcoats.

Taylor lives at 725 Eighth street northeast.

Driver Is Blamed For Death of Child

One motorist was exonerated and another held for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act yesterday by a coroner's jury which investigated two traffic fatalities.

The jury ordered Farrell J. Littlejohn, colored, 19, of 265 Hillside place northeast, held in connection with the death of 5-year-old Delano Bell, 1839 Fourth street southwest, who died in Freedmen's Hospital last Friday.

In the second inquest, Thomas H. Thorne, of Bargaintown, N. J., was acquitted in the death of Patrick Higgins, 68, 598 Park road northwest, who succumbed November 3 to injuries received when he was struck December 26, 1936. Higgins walked in front of Thorne's car at Georgia avenue and Park road northwest.

Bus Firm Uses Trains to Move Its Passengers

Greyhound Service Hampered in 16 States; Hope of Strike End Rises.

Greyhound bus officials last night issued an order to all striking drivers to report for work before noon tomorrow or consider themselves "as having resigned," and revealed a counter proposal in which virtually all of the strikers demands were refused.

Announcement of the deadline was made just a few hours after counsel for the drivers in Cleveland had reported that "prospects for settlement are getting brighter."

L. C. Major, regional manager of the Greyhound Lines here, said copies of the order and counter proposal would be mailed to drivers in Washington and vicinity by registered mail today. Major said any driver not charged with violence or other disorder would be put to work if he reported before the 12 o'clock deadline.

The contract accompanying the order, Major declared, does not provide for a closed shop and offers no increase in basic pay. These were the two chief demands of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, bargaining agent for the strikers.

The proposal, however, agreed to increase the minimum pay of extra drivers from $65 to $80 per month and $2 a day while attending drivers school. The company also agreed to pay drivers for "riding the cushions," or riding back in other buses when the schedule did not call for a round trip.

The company also agreed to pay drivers 25 cents for trips to and from the garages.

Strikers Reject Plan.

Meanwhile, strikers picketing the bus terminal at Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest, declared they would not consider the company proposal and intended to "stay on strike until we can get some kind of satisfactory agreement."

Figures quoted by Major and strikers here differ widely as to the number of drivers out on strike. Strikers last night claimed that 40 of the 47 Washington drivers were on strike and only seven regular men were working. Figures given by Major were 21 Washington drivers out on strike and only 24 men not working of the 106 drivers assigned to this region.

Identity of the three men who yesterday stoned a bus carrying 29 passengers at Accotink, Va., was learned last night, Major said, and apprehension of one of the men was expected momentarily. The men were all former employes of the company, Major said.

Scattered reports of fresh outbreaks of violence were made and the Greyhound bus terminal in Philadelphia announced that it was sending passengers by train to New York, Baltimore and Harrisburg, Pa., where they were able to obtain bus service.

29 Wholesalers Of Wine in N. C. Padlocked a Day

By the Associated Press.

Twenty-nine North Carolina liquor wholesalers, charged with importing wine into that State in violation of State laws, were forced to suspend business yesterday for 24 hours.

Their doors will remain closed until 8 a. m. today.

Technically, cessation of business was due to a 24-hour suspension of the firms' Federal liquor permits, by order of Federal Alcohol Administrator Wilford S. Alexander. Under Federal law, holders of Federal liquor permits must observe State regulations or be subject to penalties.

Coffin's Will Gives Wife $6,000 a Year

Brunswick, Ga., Nov. 29 (AP).—The will of Howard E. Coffin, who died at Sea Island November 21 from a rifle bullet wound in the head, was filed here today.

Alfred W. Jones, a cousin, was named executor of the estate and to the widow, Mrs. Gladys Baker Coffin, was bequeathed "as long as she may live and remain unmarried an annuity of $6,000.

Upon the death or remarriage of Mrs. Coffin, the will provides all of the remaining estate shall be given in equal shares to the children of Mr. and Mrs. Jones. Value of the estate was not indicated.

2 of 3 Judges For D. C. Given Senate Backing

Upper House Gets Name of Third Jurist From White House.

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the nomination of two judges who will serve in the District, while President Roosevelt sent the name of a third to the Senate.

The committee reported favorably on the nomination of Finis J. Garrett, of Tennessee, former member of the House, to be presiding judge of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. He was named to succeed the late William J. Graham.

The reappointment of John P. McMahon to be presiding judge of the District of Columbia Police Court also was recommended by the committee.

Assistant Attorney General Joseph R. Jackson was nominated by the President to be associate judge of the customs and patents court to succeed Garrett. He recently conducted a successful defense before the court of the constitutionality of reciprocal trade agreements.

Born in Albany, N. Y., 57 years ago, Jackson was educated in New York City and in Montana. After a term as attorney for Silver Bow County, Mont., he served as district judge of the county from 1917 to 1925. He then returned to New York and entered the Department of Justice in 1925.

President Roosevelt also nominated Miles H. Fairbank, of Maryland, to be assistant administrator of the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration. At present he is assistant administrator of PRRA on an interim appointment. He was formerly in the Farm Credit Administration.

Bar Seeks Special Judge on Divorces

Seeking to speed up the trial of cases in the heavily congested divorce court docket in District Court—which threatens delay of a year to some cases—a special committee of the District Bar Association yesterday formally presented to the nine justices a request that a special justice be assigned to hear divorce cass.

The committee, composed of George C. Gertman, chairman; Charles E. Ford, H. Clay Espey, Arthur J. Hilland, Isadore Brill, Ralph A. Cusick and Edward R. Wilson, jr., presented a letter to each of the nine justices.

The committee said the accumulated divorce cases now number more than 600 and are rapidly increasing. It urged that the ready cases be called for trial according to their docket numbers and that none be called out of its numerical order.

Awed Miners Trail First Lady, Mrs. Cromwell

By the Associated Press.

Brownsville, Pa., Nov. 29.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Doris Duke Cromwell, "the world's richest girl," lunched on corn pudding and chicken today with homesteaders from the coal mines.

At a little 200-acre homestead project 6 miles from here, conducted privately by the Friends Service Committe, a Quaker social aid organiation, they tramped across muddy fields to view community barns, the co-operative store and filling station and seven homes in process of construction.

Mrs. Cromwell peeked into the little houses in which settlers are living until their permanent homes are built.

The residents, miners and their families, trailed in awe at the heels of the President's wife and her wealthy companion.

Speaking informally to a small group, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"I think the beauty of this homestead is that you, on your own initiative and with a limited sum of money, are establishing your own homes, away from the crowded mining communities.

"Any Government - sponsored project," she said, "can only suffice to supply a pattern which the people can follow.

"Where you start these projects on your own initiative, I think you take a greater pride in your farms and homes than in some of the other homesteads."

The car carrying Mrs. Cromwell and Mrs. Roosevelt became mired in a mud road once and 12 of the miner-homesteaders pushed it out.

Today's visit ended a three-day journey to two Government resettlement projects in West Virginia—at Tygart Valley and Arthurdale—and this private enterprise, the smallest of the three.

The two women parted company in Pittsburgh late today. Mrs. Cromwell boarded an airplane for Newark and Mrs. Roosevelt took a train to New York.

17-Year-Old Schoolboy Held in Extortion Case

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—A 17-year-old high school boy was in jail today, Sheriff Moore M. Reynolds said, on charges of sending a threatening letter demanding $1,000 from W. C. Allen, a farmer.

Reynolds said the youth, Herbert Ray Swiger, would be turned over to Federal officers. The sheriff said he and two deputies arrested Swiger as he attempted to take a decoy package from a rural mail box.

Bank Held Up Twice.

Springfield, Mo., Nov. 29 (AP).—Robbers staged the second holdup within four months at the Citizens Bank here today. Two men fled with approximately $9,000.

Swope Opposes Insurance Cut To Aid Housing

Business Group Roosevelt Consulted Is Against His Program.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—President Roosevelt's proposals to Congress on stimulating residential construction were reliably reported today as at variance with recommendations by one group of businessmen and industrialists who conferred with him on the subject.

This group, reliable sources said, opposed raising the insurable limit from 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property, as at present, to 90 per cent in the case of loans to owner-occupants of houses where appraised value does not exceed $6,000.

Opposition also was expressed to two other points in the housing message. One of these is the proposal to reduce the interest charge of 5 per cent and the service charge of ½ of 1 per cent to a total of 5 per cent net annually. The other is the recommendation on fixing the mortgage insurance premium as low as ½ of 1 per cent on the diminishing balance of an insured mortgage instead of on the face amount as now required; and, as a stimulus to small-home building, the supplementary proposal to fix the premium as low as ¼ of 1 per cent in cases where the value does not exceed $6,000.

The view of this group—which included Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, and S. Sloan Colt, president of the Bankers Trust Co.—was explained as being that the raising of the insurable limit to 90 per cent, while it allows a person to build a home with less cash than was needed before, lessens the home-owner's security in his property to the point of jeopardy and will make private enterprise less desirous of making the money available for building.

As to reducing the interest charges to 5 per cent net, annually, it was said this group expressed opposition because it felt the amending of the regulations, to accomplish this, might alter the current service charge of ½ of 1 per cent and these men believe it necessary to preserve this charge intact if banks and mortgage companies are going to display any energy in seeking such business.

Treasury Will Continue Borrowing Until Dec. 15

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday the current Treasury borrowing of $50,000,000 a week on Treasury bills would be continued up to and including December 15. These bills will refund older issues maturing before December 15, the next big tax collection date.

Morgenthau will meet tomorrow with the executive committee of the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee to discuss longer term borrowing. Formal announcement of this borrowing will be made next Monday morning.

U. S. Asked to Help Railroads Meet 'Worst Financial Crisis'

The shippers met immediately after the morning adjournment and chose R. C. Fulbright, a Washington attorney, as chairman; Walter Lacey, also a Washington lawyer, secretary, and J. K. Hiltner, an attorney of Burlington, N. J., secretary pro tem.

Hiltner asserted certain shipping groups are not against the proposed increase, noting particularly that the iron and steel interests he represents favor the principle of the increase but oppose the railroads' method in asking a flat raise.

Region Hearings Sought.

The group decided to ask the commission for regional hearings to begin in the middle of January at strategic points throughout the country—at Salt Lake City, Memphis, Chicago, among others.

One of the shippers' counsel, Wilbur LaRoe, jr., asked during the session yesterday that each Class I railroad furnish a financial statement in order to show which lines need the increase most.

Pelley, summarizing the case of the railroads, said:

"Since May 1, 1933, which may be regarded as about the bottom of the depression, prices of things we use have increased 40 per cent, our taxes have increased 25 per cent, our wages have increased 18 per cent.

"During the same period revenues for carrying a ton of freight 1 mile have increased 10 per cent and revenues for transporting a passenger 1 mile have increased 20 per cent.

Costs Up $665,000,000.

"To handle the traffic of the year ended June 30, 1937, at the level of prices, wages and taxes now prevailing, would cost us $665,000,000 more than it would have cost to have handled the same traffic at the 1933 level of prices, wages and taxes.

" . . . On the basis of the volume of business for the year ended June 30, 1937, we estimate the increases in rates and fares requested would yield $517,000,000 per year.

"The increases recently granted by the ICC should yield $50,000,000, making a total of 567,000,000, or $98,000,000 less than the amount of our increased annual expenses because of rising prices since May 1, 1933."

Later, when Dr. Parmelee referred similarly to the "rising tide of costs," Commissioner Aitchison caught him up quickly, asking:

"By the use of the word "rising," do you predict that costs will go still higher?"

Amends Wording.

Parmelee retracted his use of the word, insisting "I am not a prophet and I meant rising only up until now."

Aitchison continued:

"You do not attempt to prognosticate, therefore, any further increase or advance in costs to the railroads?"

Parmelee said, "No." He added a little later, under examination by his own counsel, J. H. Souby, that he believed the present slump is a recession in business and not a depression. He described the recession as "a temporary dip which will not continue for more than a few weeks, or, at the most, months," declaring:

"I have a number of reasons for this opinion, which I share with 90 per cent of a group of 1,000 economists recently polled by a newspaper."

Parmelee outlined drastic retrenchment measures this recession has forced on the railroads, saying purchases have been curtailed and employment reduced "with serious economic effects on the Nation."

Expenditures Decline.

He pointed out that railroads had spent for additions and betterments to railway property an average of more than $863,000,000 a year for the two years 1929 and 1930. This average, he noted, declined during the five years 1931-1935 to $206,000,000 a year for capital expenditures, a decline of more than 75 per cent. In 1936 the figure rose only to $298,000,000.

The increase in rail revenues in 1936 and the first half of this year, he said, "made it possible for the carriers to increase the number of their own employes and also increase their orders for new equipment, materials and supplies.

"This upward trend has now reversed itself," he said. "Equipment orders are at a standstill. Railway purchases have been curtailed. The number of railway employes decreased more than 58,500 men from July 15 to October 15, this year."

Earnings Under 2 Per Cent.

Dr. Parmelee piled up his points steadily, arguing that the highest rate of return earned by the railroads on their investment in any year since 1931 was 2.57 per cent; the lowest, 1.25 per cent, and the average rate for the period less than 2 per cent, while in three of those years the rails failed to earn fixed charges.

"Last year," he said, "nearly 40 per cent of the rail mileage of the country operated at a deficit, a proportion that since has increased, so that nearly one-half operated in the red the first eight months of 1937."

The amount of additional freight revenue needed means an increase of 15.7 per cent in freight rates, he said, but declared that the railroads asked an average increase of only 12.8 per cent—less than 15 per cent because of the maxima placed on certain groups of commodities.

13.7 Per Cent Needed in East.

He estimated a need in the Eastern district for an increase of 13.7 per cent, in the Southern district of 16.1 per cent, and in the Western district of 18.2 per cent. Proposed increases for these regions, he said, are only 12.1 per cent, 12.5 per cent and 13.8 per cent, respectively.

In extensive detail, Dr. Parmelee specified the reasons for increased cost of operation since 1933, stipulating a 38 per cent rise in prices of materials and supplies of all kinds other than fuel as highly responsible. Higher cost of coal has added to costs of the roads more than $52,000,000 annually since that date, he said.

Commissioner Aitchison, during this exposition, asked the carriers to extend their cost data back beyond May, 1933, to 1929, to broaden the comparative statistics.

U. S. Exports Exceed Imports In October Gain

Foreign Shipments Jump as Favorable Trade Balance Is Seen.

By the Associated Press.

American exports of merchandise rose last month to the highest total for any month in more than seven years, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The country exported $3 worth of goods for every $2 worth it imported. This gave the Nation a favorable 1937 trade balance for the first time.

Dr. Alexander V. Dye, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, commented:

"This is a very bright spot in the business picture. Our rising exports ought to offset part of the recession in domestic trade."

He said this year's bumper crops played an important part in returning America to its traditional position as a world exporter. Farm imports, particularly of corn and of vegetable oils, dwindled during October and farm exports, especially of wheat and fruit, increased. Previously, in the wake of the crop-shortening 1936 drought, agriculture imports had risen to $45,000,000 in June. They declined to $19,000,000 in October.

The bureau said:

"The major part of the export increase in October was due to larger shipments of manufactured articles. Exports of metals and manufactures were nearly twice as large as last year in value, and exports of machinery, including vehicles, and of petroleum products, approximately one-half larger in October, 1937."

All exports amounted to $333,136,000 and imports $224,391,000. Exports for the first ten months of the year totaled $2,712,426,000 and imports $2,651,983,000, producing an export balance of $60,443,000.

The export balance at the end of October last year was $18,783,000.

October exports this year were 12 per cent higher than in September and 26 per cent better than in October, 1936. October imports were 4 per cent less than September's, but 6 per cent more than in October, 1936.

At the trial Judge Anthony Botti characterized Carney as an "inciter of riots" and warned "Mr. Carney, if he is still here, to keep out of Jersey City with your C. I. O. hoodlums."

Assistant City Corporation Counsel Lewis Hansen, asking that the six charged with unlawful assembly be held for grand jury action, declared:

"We want to protect the workers of this city against such men as Carney. We don't want the C. I. O. here and we won't have the C. I. O. here."

Samuel L. Rothbard, chairman of the C. I. O. legal committee, said in Newark the C. I. O. would seek a Federal court injunction to restrain Jersey City authorities from interfering with distribution of handbills at industrial plants.

Ford Plant Operating.

St. Louis, Nov. 29 (AP).—Milton N. Johnson, manager of the Ford Motor Co. assembly plant, announced tonight 52 cars were turned out today despite a strike by the United Automobile Workers of America.

Informed of this production report, Delmond Garst, strike leader and a regional director of the C. I. O. union, charged Ford was operating with imported labor and not with regular employes. A light picket line was maintained throughout the day.

ings. He said he didn't know what the statement contained, but signed it because he feared for his life at the hands of "bloody Harlan" coal operators.

"While I was in jail in Harlan," said Tackett, "a lady came in and said she was from a New York newspaper. She wouldn't give her name, but asked a lot of questions and left. Later, she came back with a statement which she said was the story I had given her. She read it over, or said she was reading it over.

"I wanted to make sure I wasn't signing anything that wasn't the truth, so I called in Father Henry Henses, a Harlan priest. Father Henses read the statement, but didn't read it to me. He said there was nothing in it that would hurt me if it was the truth. Then I signed it."

In addition to detailing the alleged dope and beer instances, the statement also repudiated testimony previously given by Tackett as the basis of perjury charges against Creech.

Although the "life story" has never been published and has not been identified as correctly setting forth information furnished by Tackett, it quoted him as saying he was permittted to leave the District Jail at night to obtain newspapers and in this manner secured marijuana cigarettes and beer "which kept him drunk all the time he was in Washington."

Assistant United States Attorney David Pine brought out evidence that Tackett could not use a typewriter, read very poorly and didn't know the meaning of many words contained in the "life story."

Continued wrangling between Leahy and the witness ended when the defense counsel asked Tackett if he knew what it meant to take an oath to tell the truth.

"Do you know what it means in Harlan County when they tell you to sign a paper or else?" countered Tackett.

The witness said he made numerous statements and agreed to "most anything" because he was afraid he ing April 16 and heard Creech threaten him with "8 to 10 years" in jail for testifying before the Senate committee.

It was this threat, later denied by Creech, which resulted in the perjury charges.

The prosecution indicated it would rest its case today and Defense Counsel Leahy is expected to request a directed verdict of acquittal.

The prize Automobile Story of the year is wrapped up in Buick—with its DYNAFLASH ENGINE and TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING

THERE are several hundred thousands of people who'll tell you from personal experience that Buick isn't one to promise what it can't provide.

So when we're all excited about the DYNAFLASH engine and its companion-in-greatness, BuiCoil TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING—we're not just gushing, we're stating facts you can prove out for yourself.

Step in—take charge—put this quick and quiet honey up against the kind of driving you know best—you'll sense instantly in its smoothness and lift that this car is really giving you more for your gasoline money!

Ask more of it than you've any honest right to ask of any car—and the fretless, gracious, joyous way it does things tells you better than we can that you've got something in that DYNAFLASH engine!

And don't lavish all your praise on the power plant! Great as it is, there's something equally great doing marvelous things at the other end of the car!

That poised, jarless, winging ride is one thing that BuiCoil TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING gives. Light-as-fluff handling—freedom from tail-wag—absence of wander—these also stem from those stout, easy-flexing, ever-soft springs of coiled steel.

You hold the road—even on sharp curves. You face fewer skid risks—even on ice-glazed streets. You find rear tires last longer, spring greasing is out, maintenance is far simpler.

All because BuiCoil Springing is here!

Fool you? We wouldn't even try! These are tangible things, let us demonstrate.

That, we figure, makes your car-buying vastly easier this year. For in fifteen minutes behind a Buick wheel, you'll know which car you've got to have!

EVERY SPARK SETS OFF A CYCLONE!

Rushing into the cylinder at speeds as high as 250 miles an hour, the fuel charge strikes the Turbulator built into the piston. Instantaneously it is converted into a tiny cyclone of terrific turbulence. The spark flashing into this cyclompression, fires a faster, cleaner, more furious explosion which drives piston down with almost 10% stronger power-push.

A SAFETY CUSHION ON EACH WHEEL!

Buick replaces the usual type spring with this special spring of stout coiled steel and big direct-acting Transport Type shock absorbers. Rigidly aligned by the Torque Tube, rear axle and wheels cannot twist or distort, cannot affect steering, greatly reducing danger from skids. No shackles, no grease points, no chatter, no premature rear tire wear.

Bill to Revive Merchant Fleet Goes to House

Quick Enactment Will Aid in Replacing Old Boats, Rep. Bland Says.

By Edward T. Folliard

A bill to rehabilitate America's "sick" merchant marine, in line with the program of the Maritime Commission, was introduced yesterday by Representative Schuyler Otis Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

Chairman Bland said its prompt enactment will go a long way toward replacing old, worn-out American vessels engaged in foreign trade and thereby strengthen the merchant marine as an auxiliary to the Navy.

Bland's bill also gives the Maritime Commission control over American aircraft in foreign commerce, and directs the commission to aid in the development of this new agency of travel by extending the subsidy features of the Merchant Marine act of 1936 to the building and operation of flying boats.

Air Competition Near.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, recently reported to Congress that giant flying boats, carrying 40 to 50 passengers and crossing the Atlantic in 20 hours, were a "near reality." He predicted that flying boats would cut heavily into the business of the "super-liners," and urged American steamship companies to add them to their fleets of surface vessels.

Chairman Bland told The Post last night that he was working on a separate bill to cope with what the Maritime Commission called the "disgraceful" labor situation in the American merchant marine. If Bland follows the recommendations of the commission, his bill will provide for a maritime mediation board patterned after the Railway Labor Board.

Maritime unions affiliated with the C. I. O. have objected to such a mediation board, arguing that it would curb the right to strike. They, also have attacked the plan of the Maritime Commission to have the Coast Guard train 500 American youths each year for the merchant marine.

Early Hearings Opposed.

The C. I. O. maritime unions yesterday telegraphed Chairman Bland from New York protesting against his plan to start hearings on the new merchant marine bill Thursday morning. They said that a hearing at this time would "prevent maritime unions from carefully studying conditions and adequately preparing a case," and also would prevent "Pacific Coast unions from being represented."

Chairman Bland said his committee would go ahead with hearings Thursday at 10 o'clock.

Bland's bill, made up a series of amendments to the 1926 merchant marine act, contains in addition to a provision placing transoceanic aircraft under the Maritime Commission, the following features:

The down payment on new ship construction is changed from 25 per cent of the domestic cost to 25 per cent of the foreign cost. (As foreign costs are greatly below domestic costs, this will permit some American companies to build ships that they otherwise might not be able to afford.)

Recapture Period Changed.

The period for recapture is changed from five years to ten years.

It permits the transfer to foreign registry of any subsidized vessels upon cancellation of the subsidy contract by the Government "without just cause," or where there has been no default on the part of the contractor.

The Maritime Commission is given power to waive the $25,000 salary limitation for ship companies when such waiver would be in the public interet.

Christmas Seals On Hotel Menus

A new use for the "Town Crier" Chritmas seals, sold by the Tuberculosis Association to raise funds for the 1938 campaign against the "white plague," has been discovered by Washington hotel managers who are affixing the emblems to their daily printed menus.

Hotels bringing the capmaign before their guests by this novel method include the Mayflower, Willard, Powhatan, Ambassador, Hamilton and Raleigh. Association officials expressed the hope that the practice would spread to other hotels and restaurants throughout the city.

Roosevelt Asks Congress to Revise FHA Law To Spur 16 Billion Boom in Home Building housing construction" and that "it provides for practically every need to start the flow of capital into channels now dried up, but which formerly energized the services of 4,000,000 men, from forest and mine to railroads, factories and workmen."

Douglas Whitlock, general counsel for the Structural Clay Products Institute—representing the brick and tile manufacturers of the country—applauded the message as a recognition of the housing problem in all its aspects. He added that the President's plan to initiate a series of conferences with representatives of industry, labor and finance had "the hearty support of the institute, which was the first industrial group to hail the preliminary housing conferences at the White House as a step in the right direction."

Green Attacks Program.

"When the President asks if industrialists will co-operate in 'averting a recurrence of the conditions that brought about the reverses of the present year' (high costs)" Whitlock asserted, "the Structural Clay Products Institute answers: 'We will.'"

Paul E. Stark, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, told a meeting at Jacksonville, Fla., according to the Associated Press, that the President's message "strikes at the very root of the economic problems of the Nation."

The only voices critical of the President's program were those of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and several of his building trades aides. They held Mr. Roosevelt's advocacy of a reduced hourly labor wage rate in return for increased annual income as impractical.

Administration officials were disinclined to take Green's remarks as a serious obstacle to the program, pointing out that the question of lower labor costs was a matter for negotiation between individual builders and local building craftsmen and was a problem that could not be treated on a Nation-wide scale. They pointed out that local building trades unions are autonomous when it comes to fixing wage rates.

Nine Changes Asked.

Changes in the FHA insurance law recommended by the President were as follows:

1. Authority to national mortgage associations, provided by FHA act, to make direct loans to limited dividend corporations on insured mortgages.

2. Expansion of the borrowing capacity of national mortgage associations to permit them to issue bonds and debentures, etc., in an amount not greater than 20 times their paid-in capital and surplus, instead of 12 times, as law now provides.

3. Revival of Title I of the FHA act, which expired last April, providing Government insurance on modernization and repair loans, but excluding loans on equipment, except heating and plumbing apparatus.

4. Increasing the maximum insurance on occupant-owned homes on which the mortgage does not exceed $5,400, constructed after the passage of this amendment from 80 to 90 per cent of the appraised value of the property, provided a down payment of at least 10 per cent has been made.

5. Making permanent the Treasury guarantee of FHA debentures issued in settlement of mortgages on foreclosed property.

6. Limiting after July 1, 1939, FHA insurance to newly constructed houses or dwellings on which FHA insurance previously had been issued.

7. Reduction of the premium charge, now one-half of 1 per cent of the face value of insured mortgages, to one-quarter of 1 per cent of the diminishing balance on houses with with an appraised value not in excess of $6,000 and one-half of 1 per cent on the diminishing balance instead of the original face amount on mortgages on property in excess of $6,000.

8. Clarification of the existing law in regard to insurance of mortgage loans to limited dividend corporations or public housing agencies, with a limit on such insured loans of $1,200 per room.

9. Extension of insurance up to 80 per cent of the appraised value to mortgage loans between $16,000 and $200,000 on projects for not less than 25 family units where the value is not in excess of $1,000 per room.

Large Scale Building Is Aim.

Proposals enumerated above as one, two, five and eight are designed primarily to encourage construction of large scale housing projects. The purpose of authorizing the national mortgage associations to make direct loans on large limited dividend corporation projects and the increase in the borrowing ratio of such associations to their capital is to create a mechanism for channeling idle money of both individuals and institutions into large scale construction. Lack of facilities for financing such projects are held to have discouraged their construction in recent years.

Creation of this financial mechanism also will play a part in reducing the cost of financing housing projects and the reductions in the premium rates on both small and large housing projects are proposals aimed at the same objective. The increase of insurance on small homes is designed to make home ownership easier for low income groups.

The bills introduced in House and Senate propose a number of technical and clarifying amendments of provisions now in the law, in addition to the major changes outlined above. While some of these other changes are regarded as important by the real estate and financial communities they are too technical to be of general interest.

There is nothing in the legislation proposed by the President which directly attacks the high cost of housing. But Mr. Roosevelt believes that if a financial mechanism is created which makes large-scale housing operations possible, large economies can be effected through mass purchase of materials and continuous employment of labor and through negotiation between builders and labor on one hand, and material manufacturers on the other.

Mr. Roosevelt devoted a considerable portion of his message to a discussion of the effect which rising material and labor prices have had on housing construction. He held it to be a problem that must in major part be solved by the industry itself.

Speaking of the legislative proposals he was making, the President asserted that "the adoption of these measures would for the first time provide all the financial mechanisms essential to a widespread and sustained revival of housing construction."

"The terms of the financing," he added, "would be the most favorable ever made generally available in this country for housing purposes—half, or less than half, the cost of loans of comparable proportions under the system of first, second and third mortgage financing that was widely prevalent in the 1920's."

Dewey to Give Lehman Marinelli Reply Today

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Special Rackets Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey and his assistants questioned witness after witness before the extraordinary grand jury today, seeking evidence to support Dewey's charges that County Clerk Albert Marinelli, Tammany district leader, was unfit for office.

Dewey said he expected to send an "answer" late tomorrow to Gov. Lehman, who invited him last week to draw up formal charges against Marinelli, described by Dewey in a radio address October 24, as an associate of thugs and racketeers.

Text of President's Special Message to Congress Urging Housing Program

Text of the President's message to Congress yesterday on housing legislation:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my message to the Congress upon the convening of the extraordinary session on November 15 I said that I would address you further in regard to proposals to encourage the private construction and financing of housing on a large scale. The proposals which I am presenting for your consideration now are an important part of the program for increasing general business activity and employment during the coming year.

From the point of view of widespread and sustained economic recovery, housing constitutes the largest and most promising single field for private enterprise.

Housing construction has not kept pace with either the needs or growth of our population. From 1930 to 1937, inclusive, the average annual number of new dwelling units constructed in the United States was 180,000, as contrasted with an annual average of 800,000 in the seven years prior to 1930. In addition, much of our existing housing has seriously deteriorated, or has been demolished.

Estimate Is Given.

It is estimated that an average of 600,000 to 800,000 dwelling units ought to be built annually over the next five years to overcome the accumulated shortage and to meet the normal growth in number of families. In other words, we could build over the next five years 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 housing units, which at a moderate estimate of $4,000 per unit would mean spending from $12,000,000,000 to $16,000,000,000, without creating a surplus of housing accommodations, and consequently without impairing the value of existing housing that is fit for decent human occupancy.

The long-continued lag in building is a drag on all industry and trade. This presents an urgent problem which is the common concern of industry, labor and government. All business needs the infusion of orders and the diffusion of purchasing power that come when building is thriving. Great numbers of people look directly or indirectly to the construction industry for employment. This industry, to a greater extent than any other, can put idle funds to work and thus speed up the circulation of the Nation's money supply. This, in turn, would increase national income, reduce unemployment and as a result contribute toward a balancing of the budget.

Since 1933 we have had a great recovery movement in which housing construction has played only a minor part. That it should play a major part has been clearly recognized by this Administration from the outset. But, though much has been done to encourage construction activity, the results have not yet been satisfactory. Instead of a seasonal rise in housing construction through the past spring and summer, there was an early downturn. This was one of the principal reasons why general business failed to forge ahead during the latter part of the year.

Soaring Costs Blamed.

We must recognize clearly that housing will not be built if costs are too high in relation to the consumer's income. The fact that housing costs rose sharply—far too sharply—between September of 1936 and March of 1937 was primarily responsible for the downturn in housing and thus in recovery generally this year.

Revival of housing construction must be based on reduction of the costs of building and the payment for buildings rather than on a resumption of the rising costs that stopped progress in this essential field last spring and summer. Housing must be produced at prices, rates and rents that the mass of our people can afford to pay.

The Government has made provision, through assistance to municipal housing, for many of the most needy. But private enterprise and private capital must bear the burden of providing the great bulk of new housing. The measures I now suggest are to encourage private building to meet the needs of families of moderate means. These proposals cannot be effective, however, unless all elements concerned in the construction industry—builders, contractors, manufacturers of materials and equipment, labor and finance—co-operate in producing housing that is within reach of the incomes of the vast majority of our citizens.

If the building industry is to play the vital part that it ought to have in our economic system, it must do it in the characteristic American way. It must develop, as other great industries have developed, the American genius for efficient and economical largescale production. The lower unit costs resulting from large-scale production will make for greater annual returns for the entire building industry, including all workers engaged in that industry, and for a higher standard of living for the country as a whole.

Problem Must Be Solved.

The problem of reducing costs to a point where larger volume, longer employment, and higher annual earnings are possible is one that must be solved in major part by the building industry itself. The Government, however, can take the initiative by bringing about a reduction of financing costs, by making it easier for families of moderate means to buy or rent new houses, and by providing mechanisms to make it practicable for private enterprise to engage in large-scale housing operations for the mass market.

In order, therefore, that Government may give the fullest encouragement to a broad revival of building, I recommend that the Congress adopt at this time measures to facilitate the financing of every type of housing construction, whether for sale or for rent, and ranging from the small house to entire residential communities and large low-rent apartment buildings. In addition to measures to stimulate new construction, I recommend that provision be made for an extensive program of repairs and modernization.

As a practicable means of encouraging and facilitating a more effective operation of private enterprise and private capital in the housing field, I am suggesting enlargement of the framework of the National Housing act in the light of actual experience. This legislation, enacted by the Congress in 1934, provided a new financial mechanism applicable to all types of lending institutions that make loans for housing purposes. Enabling legislation giving effect to this new mechanism was subsequently enacted by all the States. Within the limits of the types of housing to which it applies, it has proved to be popular and practical.

Housing Act Explained.

Under the National Housing act the Congress established the Federal Housing Administration, which insures mortgages on certain types of housing, but itself makes no loans. The agency is designed to become self-sustaining through the operation of a mortgage insurance fund, into which premiums are paid by borrowers who obtain loans under the provisions of the act from private lending institutions. An ultimate guaranty of loans that may default is given by the Federal Government, but this guaranty becomes operative only in the event that recoveries from the sale of defaulted properties, together with all the monies in the insurance fund, should be insufficient to pay the insured claims. Hence, even if any cost should result to the Government because of this guaranty, it would be negligible when measured by the volume of construction and employment induced by the fact that the guaranty is there should it ever have to be availed of.

The benefits of financing under the national housing act apply to two main classes of transactions—namely, those in which a single house becomes security for a loan and those in which a limited-dividend company obtains a loan in order to develop a rental housing project. The amendments which I am suggesting are of three kinds: (1) To effect further reductions in financing costs; (2) to extend the insurance of mortgages to types of housing operations not now adequately provided for in the act; (3) to make the funds of institutional and individual investors more easily available for the financing of large-scale operations.

Because it takes the average buyer of a house or investor in housing a long time to pay for the property, the cost of financing is in the long run one of the largest items in housing costs. In the case of rental housing, it is a demining factor; first, in whether construction shall be undertaken at all, and, second, in arriving at the scale of rentals to be charged.

Interest Cut Sought.

Institutions making loans to be insured by the Federal Housing Administration are now permitted by regulation to make an interest charge up to 5 per cent and a service charge of one-half of 1 per cent, or a total of 5½ per cent per annum. It is proposed to reduce this to 5 per cent net by amending the administrative regulations.

As a means of further reducing the cost to the borrower, however, I would ask the Congress to authorize the Federal housing administrator to fix the mortgage insurance premium as low as one-half of 1 per cent on the diminishing balance of an insured mortgage instead of on the original face amount, as now required by the act. Further, as a means of giving special encouragement to the construction of small, moderately priced houses, I would ask the Congress to authorize the Federal housing administrator to fix the mortgage insurance premium as low as one-fourth of 1 per cent on the diminishing balance of an insured mortgage in cases where the estimated value of the property to be built does not exceed $6,000, and where the mortgage is insured prior to July 1, 1939.

Another change that I would ask the Congress to make in the existing legislation is to raise the insurable limit from 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property, as at present, to 90 per cent in the case of loans to owner-occupants where the appraised value of the property does not exceed $6,000. This proposal is of great importance. It recognizes the fact that most persons who desire to own homes of their own cannot make a first payment as large as 20 per cent of the purchase price. This is particularly true after the severe depression of recent years, in which the savings of millions of prudent and thrifty families were depleted.

Majority Rent Homes.

The fact is not generally recognized that the majority of our urban families are not homeowners. In the larger cities, the proportion of rented dwellings runs from 60 to nearly 80 per cent of the total. Accordingly, I am suggesting for your consideration measures designed especially to facilitate the construction and financing, under the economies of a blanket mortgage, of groups of houses for rent, or for rent with an option to purchase. Such operations would afford economies in construction as well as in financing, and would therefore, I believe, lead to the formation of substantial companies to avail themselves of the opportunities in this particular field. These same measures are also designed to encourage the construction of apartment buildings to be operated on a moderate scale of rentals, with the mortgage in any case not to exceed $1,000 per room. This is a type of apartment property particularly adapted to the requirements of our smaller cities.

In the construction of large-scale rental properties, a small but creditable beginning has already been made under the existing provisions of the national housing act applicable to limited-dividend companies. Those provisions, however, need to be clarified and simplified in order to encourage a more extensive development of large rental projects in the larger communities where they are needed.

Among the most important of the measures, to which I would invite your consideration are those designed to facilitate the financing of these large projects. Here there is a great gap in our financial mechanisms. The large projects thus far constructed under the provisions of the national housing act have been closely regulated as to rents, charges, capital structure, rate of return, etc., and the excesses and abuses which widely characterized the financing of apartment properties in the 1920s have thereby been avoided. The very size of the loans in the case of these large projects, however, makes it difficult to finance them by means of a single mortgage.

Liberalization Asked.

I would therefore urge the Congress to liberalize the provisions of the act under which the chartering of national mortgage associations is authorized, and, among other things, to give these associations explicit authority to make loans on large-scale properties that are subject to special regulation by the Federal housing administrator. The effect of the change here proposed would be to enable these properties to be financed by national mortgage associations through the sale of housing bonds or debentures amply secured by the insured mortgages on the properties.

In order that one or more such associations may be promptly organized, I shall ask the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make available, out of the funds already allocated to the RFC Mortgage Co., $50,000,000 for capital purposes. Under the amendments proposed, this would provide the basis for $1,000,000,000 of private funds obtainable through the sale of national mortgage association debentures.

Another of the suggested amendments that I regard as of special importance would make the limitation of $2,000,000,000 on the amount of mortgages insurable under the national housing act apply to the amount of insurance to be outstanding at any time and would remove the limitation of July 1, 1939, now applicable to the ultimate guaranty of the Federal Government. These changes would measurably encourage private financing under the act without increasing the amount of the contingent guaranty provided in the existing legislation. In connection with these changes, I would suggest that the Congress eventually limit the insurance of mortgages to housing on which the application for mortgage insurance is approved prior to the beginning of construction.

Repair Loans Sought.

Finally, I am suggesting that insurance be provided for repair and modernization loans in a manner similar to that which was formerly provided under Title I of the national housing act. This former provision expired by limitation on April 1 of the present year.

Considered in relation to existing provisions of the national housing act, the Federal Reserve act, the Federal Home Loan Bank act, and extensive enabling legislation that has been enacted by the several States, the adoption of these measures would for the first time provide all the financial mechanisms essential to a widespread and sustained revival of housing construction. The terms of financing would be the most favorable ever made generally available in this country for housing purposes—half, or less than half, the cost of loans of comparable proportions under the system of first, second, and third mortgage financing that was widely prevalent in the 1920s. Large and continuous activity and employment in housing construction, which is not feasible under our present limited methods of financing, would be put decisively on a practicable basis.

The success of such a program as this, however, cannot be assured by governmental action alone. It will depend mainly on the willingness of industry and labor to co-operate in producing housing at costs that are within the reach of the mass of our people. The goal at which both industry and labor should aim is sustained large-scale production at lower costs to the consumer. This will mean a large annual wage for labor because of the larger amount of employment than is possible at high hourly rates with long periods of unemployment. It will mean a larger annual income for industry because of the larger volume of production than is possible at high unit prices with greatly restricted output.

Because this was not the goal of industry and labor during the past construction year, the result soon proved injurious not only to the building industry and its workers, but to business and employment generally. The sharp rise of wage rates and prices in this industry, just before the last building season, reduced by 100,000 to 150,000 the number of new dwelling units that competent authorities had estimated were in prospect for 1937.

Adjustment Held Vital.

It is now clear that we cannot have a strong revival of housing construction on the terms that were exacted by industry and labor last spring. The rise in hourly wage rates and in material prices was too rapid and too great for the consumer to bear. A similar rise in costs likewise checked production and buying in other industries as well. In emphasizing these facts, I am not seeking to apportion blame, for manifestly no industrial or labor groups would deliberately adopt a policy that would react to their own disadvantage. I am simply pointing out what did occur and what the consequences were.

In the budget of the great mass of our families, the point is quickly reached where increased costs mean reduced consumption. Reduced consumption, in turn, means a decline in someone's business and someone's employment. The essential problem of the construction industry and its workers, then, is to find a reasonable way, through continuity of production and employment, to adjust the costs of housing to the consumer's means.

To help attain this end, it is my intention to initiate a series of conferences with representatives of industry, labor, and finance, with a view to giving housing construction a fresh start in the coming building year and averting a recurrence of the conditions that brought about the reverses of the present year. If these groups will co-operate in this effort, as I believe they will, the result cannot but work to the advantage of our whole national economy.

Comparatively simple changes in and additions to existing laws will make this start possible.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medicinal combination designed to aid nature in soothing and healing infected mucous membranes by allaying irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling the germ-laden phlegm.

The Medical Profession has for many years recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients and now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by both adults and children.

Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles—due to common colds—hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief that you want. Men were paying PREMIUM PRICES for some of those famous AMERICAN BLENDS like this!

HOW we'd love to be there when you open your first bottle of National's EAGLE!

You see, you're in for the treat of your life! A generation ago, before the war, there wasn't a restaurant, hotel or bar in the land, from sparkling, old Delmonico's down to Bill's Bar in the back streets of Mansfield, where you wouldn't find those magnificent, old American blends. And great whiskies they were! Some so exquisitely fine in taste that men who knew fine whiskies willingly paid premium prices for them.

And now in National's EAGLE, we have the delightful privilege of offering you once more, that same American taste! One of the first of the pre-war type of American blends that has been made in a generation. A truly American whiskey . . . made the old American way . . . by the old-time American blenders . . . of aged American whiskies and velvet grain neutral spirits . . . every drop distilled in the U. Two Business Taxes Errors, Harrison Says and contributed to the unemployment situation."

Senate Finance Chairman Pledges Relief as Soon as Possible.

"However high and laudable may be the purposes of certain policies, and however attractive they may appear theoretically, sometimes, as a practical matter, the injurious effects are greater than the benefits sought," Harrison said.

He called it a "harsh and unwise policy" for the Government to compel distribution of dividends needed to provide employment, and said that for each corporation justly penalized by the undivided profits tax "there are probably a hundred which have been unjustly penalized because, for legal or moral reasons, they could not distribute their earnings in dividends."

But the Finance committee chairman opposed "retroactive" modifications of the two taxes. He said proposed changes "should date from the first day of the next calendar year and cover the future and not the past." He said it would be unfair to penalize corporations which have already distributed dividends by giving those who have not done so "retroactive" benefits.

Harrison particularly condemned the present capital gains tax and declared no other single factor has been more influential in discouraging trade in stocks, securities or property holdings.

Credits Frozen.

He indicated his intention to go farther than the House tax subcommittee in modifying the capital gains tax. The House group has agreed to a plan for downward graduation of the capital gains tax after the property has been held over a year so that the maximum rate after five years would be 16 per cent.

Harrison said he hoped "to see the rate made lower, and greater relief given as to time requirements for holding property." He said it was apparent that those in the higher income tax brackets retain their capital holdings rather than pay the Government a tax as high in some instances as 90 per cent of their profits.

"No person," Harrison said, "can be criticized for refusing to sell a security, stock or piece of property when he knows that if a large profit has been realized the Government will give the individual one slice of the profits pie and retain nine slices for itself."

He said the tax has "filled safety deposit boxes with property in securities and stocks and cash, freezing credits and preventing the flow of capital into new enterprises."

Specifically, Harrison said he would like to see the capital gains tax taken out of the ordinary income and surtax sections of the present law and placed in a classification to itself, with "reasonable" taxes substituted.

The finance committee chairman discussed detailed House sub-committee modifications in the undivided profits tax, completely exempting companies earning up to $25,000 from the levy, and substituting a graduated scale of flat corporation income taxes.

He said that "even if we went no further" than the sub-committee's bill, "all corporations, both in the larger and smaller classes, will find great relief."

He said he would exert his influence to have the undivided profits tax modified "so as to permit a corporation, if it desires, to pay from its annual earnings, without penalty, amounts for debt retirement and for business expansion."

If it is the duty of a taxpayer to deal fairly with his Government, Harrion said, it was likewise the duty of a public servant to "be fair toward the taxpayer."

Even if the present law has 'corrected some improper practices of a few corporations," Harrison said, he was conclusively convinced "it has worked tremendous hardships upon many others."

"The result," he said, "has added confusion to the economic life of the country, and to many of our fine American citizens it has been most disheartening and discouraging."

William Livingston Birth Is Observed In 2 States Today

The 214th birthday of William Livingston, first Governor of New Jersey and one of the signers of the Constitution, will be celebrated today in New York, his home State, and New Jersey.

Graduated from Yale in 1741, Livingston was admitted to the bar in 1748 and served in the New York Legislature from 1759 to 1760. Moving to Elizabeth, N. J., in 1772, he represented the State in the first and second Continental Congresses and left Philadelphia just prior to the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Livingston was one of four delegates sent by New Jersey to the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia in 1787. The third State to ratify the Constitution, New Jersey had three other signers of the historical document. They were David Brearley, William Paterson and Jonathan Dayton.

Planes Replace Dogs, Extend Gold Fields, Alaskan Reports

The Alaskan sourdough, who once mushed painfully with a dog-sled, is beginning to resort to the airplane for his prospecting trips, Alaska Gov. John W. Troy noted yesterday.

In his annual report to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Gov. Troy said aviation is becoming one of the principal methods of transportation in Alaska.

Pointing out that in the last few years the Territorial Road Board has constructed and maintained 100 landing fields and seaplane floats, the Governor urged a $3,000,000 program for improvement and establishment of 166 land and water airports. In addition to regular air services, he said, dozens of flights are made each month to carry patients from outlying districts.

Troy's report, on the eightieth anniversary of the purchase of the Territory from Russia, emphasized that value of minerals produced there since 1880 is more than 100 times the purchase price. Alaska cost the United States $7,200,000; value of minerals produced since 1880, first year for which records were kept, is $722,222,000.

Export figures for last year show a general increase, the report said. At head of the list is canned salmon, of which $45,386,512 worth was shipped to the United States in the 1937 fiscal year, an increase of 70 per cent over 1936. Commerce between the United States and Alaska, including all imports and exports, amounted to $114,923,169, an increase of $23,162,815.

Troy recommends establishment of a full territorial government for Alaska and construction of an international highway connecting highways of the United States, Yukon Territory, British Columbia and Alaska.

Fruit Dealer Sues to Enjoin Privilege Tax

National League President Holds Levy Burden on Interstate Trade.

Alleging that the wholesale fruit and vegetable business he conducts at 1309 Water street southwest, is interstate commerce, Max Shapiro yesterday asked District Court to enjoin the District Commissioners from levying the business privilege tax on his enterprise.

The tax is a flat fee of $10 and two-fifths of 1 per cent of gross receipts.

Including by reference all members of the National League of Wholesale Fruit and Vegetable Distributors, of which he is president, Shapiro contended the taxing statute was "repugnant to the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution" as a burden on such commerce. He claimed it was a serious curtailment of freedom of interstate shipments.

FORD offers two new cars for 1938—the Standard Ford V-8 and the De Luxe Ford V-8. They are different in appearance—but both are built to the same high standard of mechanical excellence—on the same 112-inch wheelbase chassis.

PROVED V-8 PERFORMANCE

Because people liked our 1937 car so well, they bought more than of any other make. They liked its looks, its smooth performance, and the way it handled. We have improved on that car in the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.

But some folks wanted still more size and style, along with the same fundamental Ford advantages. For them, we have designed a new De Luxe line.

The De Luxe Ford V-8 Sedans are longer with more room, larger luggage space, and finer appointments. De Luxe cars are equipped with the 85-horsepower engine. They provide an added measure of motoring satisfaction at low Ford prices.

The Standard is even lower priced than the De Luxe. It has graceful new lines and well-tailored interiors. It gives you again a choice of V-8 engine sizes—85 horsepower or 60 horsepower.

Before Ford made V-type 8-cylinder engines available to every one, they were used only in expensive cars. Since then, four million Ford owners have learned the genuine enjoyment of driving an eight-cylinder car with all-around economy. The thrifty "60" engine, especially, makes possible in Standard models a very low first cost and equally low operating cost.

BOTH LINES LOW PRICED

With two distinct designs, two engine sizes and two price ranges, you'll find a 1938 Ford car to fit your personal needs exactly.

Whichever one you choose, you get the same proved Ford features. Whatever price you pay, you get a car built soundly to serve you well. . . . That's the Ford way.

PRICES FOR CARS DELIVERED IN DETROIT—TAXES EXTRA

Standard Ford V-8 (60 hp.) — Coupe, $599; Tudor, $644; Fordor, $689. Standard Ford V-8 (85 hp.) — Coupe, $629; Tudor, $669; Fordor, $714. De Luxe Ford V-8 (85 hp. only) — Coupe, $689; Tudor, $729; Fordor, $774; Convertible Coupe, $774; Club Coupe, $749; Convertible Club Coupe, $804; Phaeton, $824; Convertible Sedan, $904.

In addition, De Luxe cars are equipped with extra tail light, windshield wiper, sun visor; also de luxe steering wheel, glove compartment lock, clock, and chrome wheel bands, at no extra charge.

The Shanghai Gesture.

For sheer, unmitigated gall the attitude of Japan regarding the Chinese maritime customs at Shanghai sets a new record.

Despite the entirely legitimate protests of the United States, Great Britain and France against Japan's seizure of the customs administration at China's greatest port, a spokesman for the Tokyo foreign office has indicated that Japan will insist on her "right to act independently." In other words, she will not bother to consult other powers before carrying through a reorganization of the customs, nor will she necessarily give any consideration to the rights and interests of other nations in the issue.

The implication is clear: Japan feels that by having triumphed over the armies of Chiang Kai-shek at Shanghai she has also triumphed over the western nations that have holdings there. Shanghai, in the opinion of the Japanese foreign office spokesman, is now a "piece of mortgaged property."

Such an attitude is intolerable. Secretary Hull has taken the only step possible by supplementing his immediate protest to Tokyo by a more formal and more drastic message demanding that Japan consult with the United States before undertaking any changes in the Chinese maritime customs. To permit Japan to get away with a high-handed and utterly illegal usurpation of this service would be to stimulate the appetite of her militarists for more and more booty. And in the present inflamed state of the Japanese ego there is no telling where such a course would lead.

There can be no further retreat in the face of Japan's monstrous indifference to the rights and interests of other powers. As Mr. Hull makes plain, the time has come for a strong and courageous stand in opposition to the aggressor's assumption of the role of permanent sovereign at Shanghai.

Wage Differentials.

The wage data published in the annual report of the Department of Labor will be studied with special interest in view of the controversy over the pending wages-and-hours bill. A survey covering more than 5,000 establishments and 20 industries indicates that over 48 per cent of the unskilled workers in the South are paid less than 40 cents per hour, while only 3.5 per cent of such workers in the North receive less than that amount. Of course, many workers in Southern industries—especially women and Negroes—earn much less than 40 cents.

These statistics throw a good deal of light upon the reasons for the determined opposition of many Southern Congressmen to the wages-and-hours bill. To be sure, the proposed Labor Standards Board would have power to set rates below the 40-cent minimum which the legislation is evidently designed to establish. But there is undoubtedly a widespread fear that the South would soon lose its competitive advantages resulting from cheap labor.

It would be most unfair and unfortunate, however, to identify all opposition to the wages-and-hours bill with a purely selfish sectional determination to cling to the privilege of paying excessively low wages to underprivileged labor. Sound objections to Federal regulation of wages and hours are not based upon a defense of these conditions. Rather, they are based upon a belief that Federal legislation would not afford a proper or effective remedy.

The States can provide adequate protection against exploitation of workers, with reasonable allowance for geographical differences that may justify wage differentials between the North and the South, the East and the West. Sectional differences in living costs, for instance, undoubtedly account for some of the spread between Northern and Southern wage rates. But how great an allowance should be made for living costs or for varying degrees of efficiency is an open question.

In any case, there is grave danger that Federal regulation would, because of political pressure, tend to eliminate long-standing wage differentials too rapidly for the good of the workers whom the bill is intended to protect. Sudden changes in rates of pay decreed by an outside authority and entailing heavy additions to operating costs of Southern establishments might benefit a few employers in other parts of the country. But they would not compensate for extensive industrial dislocations and loss of jobs in the districts immediately affected.

So, while the Labor Department's wage statistics show the need for improvement of the economic position of large numbers of grossly underpaid workers, they also constitute a strong argument against the bill now pending in Congress.

A Sound Housing Policy.

President Roosevelt's message to Congress on housing brings out one of his finest qualities of statesmanship. He is not afraid to sponsor a constructive policy simply because he may have opposed it or have been lukewarm toward it in the past. Thanks to this courageous flexibility on his part, the country now has prospects of embarking upon a housing program of far-reaching economic and social significance.

The present program undoubtedly has grown out of the failure of past efforts to bring about a substantial volume of residential construction. President Roosevelt frankly recognizes that the results of past experiments "have not yet been satisfactory." So a new approach is being made. It involves no outlay of Federal funds. Provision has already been made for a slum-clearance program, and beyond that Federal spending on home construction would not be justified in any circumstances.

To a superficial observer it may appear that the Administration is turning to private industry only because the present business recession has left it no alternative. No doubt the President did speed up this program with the object of reassuring business. But it is much more far-reaching than that. Instead of merely asking private enterprise to pull New Deal chestnuts out of the fire, the President seems to contemplate a thorough overhauling of the entire home construction industry so that it may permanently operate on a more productive and efficient basis.

For the most part the message is devoted to the mechanics by which the Administration plans to initiate this movement. It would reduce the cost of financing homes under Government-guaranteed mortgages; it would cut down-payments so as to bring home ownership within the reach of greater numbers; it would facilitate the development of large-scale rental projects for families that are not in a position to buy a home. And, through the development of national mortgage associations, it would facilitate the flow of capital into these various types of residential development.

But these are only first steps toward the goal which the President seems to have in mind. They would smooth the way for a new type of building industry. There is no longer the slightest pretense that the Government itself can solve the housing problem. "If the building industry is to play the vital part that it ought to have in our economic system," the President wrote, "it must do it in the characteristic American way. It must develop, as other great industries have developed, the American genius for efficient and economical large-scale production."

At present, however, the building industry is in no position to supply the country with the type and quantity of housing it needs. If builders are to take full advantage of the opportunity to be opened up through the FHA, extensive reorganization will be called for. And some practices in which the industry now indulges will have to be sharply modified. Perhaps even more important than changes in the law, therefore, will be the series of conferences which the President intends to hold with representatives of industry, labor and finance.

Not all of the high cost of building results from excessive interest rates. In considerable measure it is due to arbitrary and inefficient policies on the part of building supply companies and labor unions. The development of large building companies in the housing field would be one effective means of smashing supply monopolies and securing an adjustment of wages. Companies to hire carpenters on a yearly basis, for example, could doubtless arrange to pay lower hourly wage rates, with a considerable saving in the cost of housing.

Presumably the President's conferences will make a direct attack upon these problems. If they should fail to bring supply and labor prices to something like a wholesale basis, results of the building program are almost certain to be disappointing. Industry has won a real victory in turning the Government away from costly housing projects of its own. But in turn it must yield to the logic of present efforts to bring about large-scale private construction of homes that the average family can afford to rent or buy.

A Hopeful Sign.

Reports from three Federal Reserve Districts—Boston, New York and Richmond—indicate that department stores are improving their inventory position quite rapidly. While stocks on hand at the end of October were higher than at the same time last year, the increases over the preceding year were much less than they were at the end of September. Especially encouraging is the fact that inventory reductions were most pronounced in the lines of goods principally responsible for burdensome accumulations.

If this downward inventory trend continues, the stores will soon find it necessary to replace their liquidated stocks to supply customers' demands. And such buying will provide a much needed stimulus to activity in various industries manufacturing consumers' goods.

An additional reason for optimism regarding the outlook for a measure of revival in the consumer goods industries is afforded by the evidence that retail sales have been well sustained so far compared with a year ago. Although from present indications decreasing employment will soon be reflected in some loss of mass purchasing power, with consequent declines in sales, there is no reason to anticipate a sudden sharp recession in buying demand. In that case, it is to be expected that a number of industries whose operations have been drastically curtailed as the result of excess inventories will begin shortly to expand as merchants find it necessary to replenish their supplies.

Meeting In London.

Less spectacular than the recent reunion of Mussolini and Hitler, but of at least equal potential importance to Europe and the world, is the meeting now taking place in London between French and British statesmen.

For some time timorousness and uncertainty have marked the foreign policies of the two great European democracies. As a result, the Fascist dictatorships have been able to win easy victories of prestige and to exert a force in the world entirely out of proportion with their actual power.

To be sure, the Paris and London governments can comfort themselves with the thought that by avoiding a showdown with the aggressive powers they have helped preserve the present uneasy and partial peace. There is something to be said for this claim. But it is also clear that such a policy of giving way to bluff and bluster has its real dangers and may, if continued, produce the very disaster it was intended to avert.

As it happens, Great Britain and France have for some time worked together. The two nations have maintained an identity of policy regarding Spain, the Mediterranean and other danger spots. But this unity has, for the most part, rested on negative rather than positive factors. It has consisted, very largely, of doing nothing or next to nothing in the hope that time will eventually dissolve difficulties dangerous to grapple with at the moment.

Now Anglo-French harmony is facing a test. Great Britain is apparently willing to make concessions to Germany to win that nation over to a program of peace and weaken the Berlin-Rome axis and the German-Italian-Japanese triangle. So, for that matter, is France. But whether the British and French governments can be brought to an agreement regarding the nature and extent of the offer to be made to Hitler is by no means certain and it is even more uncertain whether any such offer would be acceptable to the Third Reich.

In any event, the present conversations in London may mark a real turning point in Europe's affairs. Anything that would ease tensions between Great Britain and France, on the one hand, and Germany on the other, without endangering any outside nations that feel themselves within the orbit of German ambitions, would be enormously useful. Certainly the attempt to achieve that great aim is worth making.

The Bungled Bard.

You can imagine what hurt feelings there must be in Hollywood over what Lord Tweedsmuir said the other evening. In his Canadian Poetry Night address he observed, in effect, that if Hollywood were doing Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," the song "O Mistress Mine Where Are You Roaming?" would probably emerge from the script department, something like this:

Huh, sweetie, where you gettin' to,
Your big boy's here and pettin' you.

Now, considering how the producers spared neither sleep nor money to give the Bard everything that was coming to him—and a good deal more—this was decidedly unfair. Of course, the producers had the usual luck of too well-intentioned people. In preoccupation with details they overlooked the fact that an important part of Shakespeare is the spoken word, as such.

It must be admitted that a lot of curious noises did come out of the sound tracks. There was, for instance, the readings of the talented Miss Elizabeth Bergner in the movie version of "As You Like It," of which the following is a fair enough sample:

"Sair, you half wraezled whale ant owertrone Moor tan your enemiz."

And there was the production of "Romeo and Juliet" in which, though his diction was admirable, Mr. Leslie Howard managed his love scenes with about as much passion as might have been expected from, say, a penguin. Mr. Howard explained this shortcoming in a magazine article not long ago. It seems, that in their zeal for doing up the Bard to the exactly right nuance of brown, the directors and technical men would keep him at the set all day repeating over and over a single line until he was sick of it, of his Juliet, of himself and of life in general. Thus the scene into which Mr. Howard really put his heart was the one in which he purchased the poison from the apothecary.

But neither in Hollywood, nor outside of it, is there much evidence of the modern contempt for Shakespeare that Lord Tweedsmuir alleges. Indeed, things are looking up for the Bard. Three new Shakespearean productions have opened in New York recently, and last week the New York Times quoted from "Othello" and "Hamlet" in two different editorials in a single column. And last night Mr. Maurice Evans' superb production of Richard II opened here.

"A thousand years from now women will rule the world," declares a Harvard psychologist who we know is at least 1,040 years behind the times.

Anti-Drug Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is time for public opinion to be aroused to the evil consequences, not only of liquor, but also habit-forming drugs. The opium problem in the United States has attained surprising dimensions.

Why not adopt effective and energetic measures operating chiefly through educational institutions as well as the press, pulpit, screen, radio and clubs, so as to awaken public interest in the liquor and drug evils?

If this moralizing action does not succeed in forming a stronger type of youth—purer and more generous—civilization is lost.

For Elevateds, Not Subways.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Permit me space to express my utmost opposition to underground subways as advocated by some of our citizens.

I think beyond any doubt such underground subways are unsafe. They breed filth, crime and many kinds of misdemeanors. With the small force of policemen now available, proper guarding and protection to such hidden and concealed places as underground subways is impossible.

In my opinion overhead byways are far more preferable to the underground sort. I realize they undoubtedly mar the beauty of our streets and some of our handsome homes. Nevertheless, I think such objections are outweighed when safety is taken into consideration.

'Highjacker-In-Chief.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The business recession now on, which as yet has us more scared than hurt, is just another of those flarebacks from our raids on capital and wealth in general, for which the New Deal's levy on corporations was a starter.

We don't like these huge aggregations of wealth, corporate or otherwise, because of their plutocratic ways of bossing us and our Congressmen around. So we open wide to them our amplitude of resources on the most attractive terms. Then we lie in wait to open up on them with all sorts of tax guns and clubs, leaving about enough of their plunder for a periodical restaging of the performance. The rest of us innocent bystanders get enough of the stray shot, bruises, and other kinds of enjoyment from these highjacker and bootlegger or gangster melees to make it harder for us to gain an honest livelihood.

In ordinary life we are disposed to look upon highjackers, gangster, and bootleggers as equally criminal, with perhaps a shade less of regard for the highjacker. But with Uncle Sam the highjacker-in-chief, that's different.

More On Tipping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I have seen considerable discussion lately on the tipping custom in connection with the minimum wage problem. In your issue of November 27 I find a letter from a cab driver commenting on your recent editorial on the matter. I cannot agree with his explanation as to why people tip.

People tip because they are snobs, or imitators of snobs and wish to show their superiority over mere menials. And the recipients of tips degrade themselves by tacitly acknowledging their inferiority. The one who refuses to offer a tip is not one who lacks intelligence, or is a tight-wad, but is one who has the courage to show his democracy by recognizing that the one who serves him may be just as good as he is, and any self-respecting person should feel insulted by being offered a tip.

Tipping comes from certain aristocratic countries of the Old World where the people are divided by rigid barriers of class and should have no place in free America.

H. M. WALKER.
Washington, Nov. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
A recent letter on "The Tipping Problem" considers a racket imported from Europe.

Sometimes an eater appreciates the attention of a waiter and is desirous of tipping. Mostly, the tip is a forced contribution to escape unfavorable comment. For that reason, lunchrooms and cafeterias have prospered at the expense of the more dignified places and it is an open question whether the waiters and managers are better off or not in the latter.

Certainly my family would dine out frequently if we could find a place where a meal was not only reasonably priced but the waiters did not make faces because of the lack or smallness of the tips.

As we always figure a tip in the expense of a meal, we eat exclusively at home, even on Sundays and holidays. At home, the food is bound to be satisfactory, the prices right, and the service excellent. Even when the family is on vacation this holds good, for I can cook for myself, and, thank God, eat the product of my cooking with pleasure.

Washington Landscaping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
A recent satirical article by Eugene Guild in your Post Impressionist column refers to the completion of the Mall development as a "triumph of the landscaper's art." Made with PWA money under the direction of the National Parks Service, this "triumph" consists of "four roadways, running straight as a string, over which buses thunder and taxicabs streak, across which the winter winds blow with the untrammeled freedom of a gale on the Great Plains and shimmery heat waves dance in the scorching summers. And on each side of the roadway in lines as rigid as the tall metal lamp-posts rows of pitiful little saplings."

This is the dismal achievement that has replaced the lovely winding driveways under century-old oaks and maples, bordered with lovely leafy glades and dells, that Washingtonians remember.

I hope Mr. Guild will pay his respects also to similar "achievements" in our smaller downtown parks and triangles. Here too the plans of the steam shovel and cement school of landscape architecture are now practically finished—and so are the parks.

Other Traction Systems.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I have no ax to grind, but am at a loss to understand why Washingtonians are forever knocking their street car system.

"Locals" have it easy in comparison to folks elsewhere. Transportation here is vastly superior to Baltimore's not to mention Philadelphia. And have you ever used the street cars in Buffalo? If so, you'd wish you were back on a bus or streamlined Washington car.

Comments On Gallinger Hospital

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
As a long-time regular subscriber to The Post, and a long-time member of the visiting staff of Gallinger Hospital, I greatly regret the attacks on that institution now appearing in the public press of this city.

It is to be supposed that we who have given so freely of our time and energy toward the building-up and carrying-on of that institution would know its shortcomings as well as does the casual observer. We do know that much remains to be done; but we have seen Gallinger Hospital come from the Washington Asylum Hospital to one of the better municipal hospitals of this country. And then to see it wantonly attacked, for mere sensationalism, arouses all the resentment in one's make-up.

I have not seen the attack on the integrity of the resident staff, said to be in a Washington paper of this date. If what I hear of that attack—I understand it is quoted from some report—is approximately correct, it is grossly unfair, and even its repetition is grossly unfair, to those young men.

Many of the young men on the resident staff are former students of mine, and I know them well. I know that there is no group of young men of higher moral standing, in the medical profession or in any other walk of life, than are the members of the resident staff of Gallinger Hospital.

No good can come from mud-slinging and muckraking; and the indigent sick, who have come to realize the excellent medical care they receive at Gallinger Hospital, are the only ones who are confused and injured by it.

EUGENE R. WHITMORE, M. D.,
Head, Dept. of Pathology and Radiology, Gallinger Hospital.
Washington, Nov. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
After that first vitriolic outburst against Gallinger Hospital on November 23, I find your daily articles upon conditions in that hospital tempered with justice and likely to accomplish much good. All power to The Post in the effort to better conditions in a place empowered to accomplish so much good, with so few facilities.

Now, how about a first-page cheer for Dr. Bocock, the superintendent, who has worked patiently and faithfully against this mountain of ills which you describe, who has always found time to give skillful, quick and sympathetic aid to outsiders, who has done his best to direct the care for Washington's poor with antiquated working conditions?

How about a few laurels for that fine visiting staff of theirs; men like Dr. Charles Stanley White, surgical genius; Dr. Sterling Ruffin, unexcelled diagnostician; Dr. Joseph Wall, child's specialist extraordinary, and many more equally famous men who take time from busy and successful paying practice to direct the care of Washington's needy?

How about a round of hand-clapping (where people can hear it) for the nurses who care for the city's poor, irrespective of race and creed — prisoners, dope fiends, drunks, delirium tremens cases, syphilitics in all stages, maniacs, along with assorted routine cases? I was a nurse there myself. I have seen nurses mauled by maniacs. I have taken care of murderers in a barred ward. Nurses who graduate from Gallinger don't know the word "fear." If they did, they could never stick it out.

How about a few bunches of flowers for the young doctors who serve their interneship in this isolated hospital of the poor, miles from the city, with the jail on one side, a cemetery on the other, with antiquated houses to live in and antiquated buildings to work in, and antiquated laboratories and antiquated operating room equipment? They are serving without a kick, and making life a little more bearable for the submerged two-thirds of the world.

For one, I say, "Three cheers for poor old Gallinger, gallant against obstacles which would down all but brave hearts! Three cheers for the heroes and heroines who take care of the down-and-outers!"

Go ahead, Washington Post, clean the Augean stables. The nures and doctors at Gallinger will carry on while you do it. They are the breed that say little, ask little, and do much.

GALLINGER GRADUATE.
Washington, Nov. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The public has been misinformed about a number of conditions at Gallinger Hospital.

In what hospital or hotel will you not find mice or cockroaches?

Regarding the entire situation at Gallinger, the most is done with the money available.

Incident At The Zoo.

I STOOD in front of that cage so long I began to feel more like an animal on display than the four-legged creature I was trying to attract with sugar, an apple and pleasant, coaxing words.

Of course, I had read that the Bronx Zoo keeps a cow so that the sons and daughters of Hells Kitchen can see where milk comes from. But here among Dr. Mann's aristocracy of the animal kingdom they have a horse. Yes, in the same zoo that houses the world-famous Komodo dragons, Siamese gibbons, Lyang Gaddis and what have you, they keep a horse.

This horse is not a son of Man o' War. He isn't an Arabian, mustang or thoroughbred. He didn't distinguish himself at the head of a charging cavalry troop and (though he seems almost old enough) he did not bear Paul Revere on his midnight ride. But he is more than just a common horse.

With my patience almost exhausted and his curiosity aroused to a five-year peak, he forsook his evening meal long enough to mope across his 100-foot cage to greet what was probably his first outside visitor in months.

"Good evening," he said, "I couldn't tell whether you were trying to attract my attention or just get a candid camera angle on those ridiculous Tibetan yaks that occupy the next cage."

I faltered as I extended my trembling palm to offer a lump of sugar.

"Good night, man," said the horse, "you're shaking like a leaf. Don't tell me you've never seen a horse before!"

I began to wonder if I had. But the sound of the sugar crunching between his large jaws comforted my nerves enough to give me courage to ask a question. Of course, the first thing that puzzled me was how this horse could talk. But I couldn't very well ask him that until I knew him a little better. After all, we hadn't been introduced, so I asked him his name.

"They call me Billy," was the snappy reply, "but of course my real name is William."

My courage returning, I popped the question that was foremost in my mind. I had noticed that the grass around the outside of his cage had been grazed almost clean; that is, in the spots where the breaks in the fence would allow his head through. So I questioned him about this irregularity, hoping to floor him. With one of his quick matter-of-fact answers he replied:

"There are two reasons why I prefer that grass to grazing within these confines. In the first place it tastes much better; second, it is located as far away from those terrible yaks as I can get."

I suggested as a third reason the quotation about the grass in the neighbors' pasture being greener, and for this I was promptly rebuked with a question I did not care to answer:

"Did you ever eat grass?"

I hastened to change the subject. "Where did you learn to speak such good English?" I asked, striving to elevate the conversation to a higher plane.

"'Most all horses speak English," he answered curtly. "Only the majority of them are particular to whom they speak."

I tried to conceal my blush as I hastily offered him an apple. Then, making one more attempt to carry on a sociable conversation, I asked him how he liked living in a cage. Somehow he must have detected a note of sarcasm in that question for he said he would rather his cage was a brick wall and something about privacy.

"For five years I have occupied this transparent domicile. Two of those years were most happy. Then they moved those abominable yaks next door. 'Twas the end of my peace."

I was very much relieved to find that the privacy dig was not aimed solely at me.

He went on:

"Before my retirement I spent 15 years drawing truckloads of food and hay around to the different cages and houses in this park. The animals in those cages and houses were all very popular. They all had their galleries. But they weren't like those yaks. During those years we had 22 other horses to help me with my chores. With the growth in popularity of the motor truck they were all displaced and finally Dr. Mann decided to retire me. But while he was deciding he could see no reason for letting such a fine example of horseflesh go completely to waste. So it was his final decree that I should be put on display for all the world to see."

There was silence broken only by a series of reminiscent sighs. Finally, I said that I thought Dr. Mann should be complimented on his fine judgment. Billy told me he had already done so.

The sun now had faded over the hill in back of Billy's cage and I could hear the warning bell with its message that the gates were about to close. As I fed him my last piece of sugar he made me promise I would pay no attention to his neighbors as I left.

After a final pat on the neck I wandered on down Beach Drive afraid to turn and wave for fear Billy would mistake it for a friendly gesture toward the yaks.

Fair Enough

Federal Vs. State Government.

THIS MONTH'S ISSUE of Fortune reports that, of that annual tax bill of $12,000,000,000, in this country, the Federal kitty gets $5,000,000,000, the States $2,500,000,000, and 175,000 other Government units the remaining $4,500,000,000. Meanwhile, however, the States and all the little political organisms entangled in the Nation's fur and embedded in its hide are graciously yielding their duties to the national Government, but without any compensating surrender of their taxing authority.

PEGLER.

States, as well as their subdivisions, have defaulted many of their expensive duties to the national Government, passing the tasks along to Mr. Whiskers, with the result that all are now engaged in a scramble for money out of the Federal grab-bag, hoping to take out more than they put in, which can't be done indefinitely.

So what?

WELL, SO, instead of backing into the idea with stealthy proposals such as the seven TVAs and a lot of other legislative things intended to trick the customers, wouldn't it be better if someone, preferably Mr. One himself, should lay it on the line some day that this is no longer a loose and mutually parasitic social club of paper republics, but a Nation? I know the stock answer about State rights and the danger of a dictatorship after authority has been concentrated in the National Capital. But the States, to preserve their rights, should have preserved and met their responsibilities, which is something that they have not done and can no longer do.

If they really cherished these rights they wouldn't have compromised them for handouts from the national Treasury and internal services and local improvements. Your rights are proportionate to your duties. If you don't make a decent effort to take care of your kids, the court will take them away and do it for you.

And some States haven't made the effort. Some have, to be sure, but others have just curled up and dogged it, and it is impossible to kick them out or discipline the negligent or inefficient members or to declare them incompetent and carry them as wards of the able States. Some States are just tired out.

• • • •

I CAN SMELL a dictator as far as I can hear one over the air, but it does not follow that a national government must be a dictatorship. The President could still be merely that and nothing more, and the Congress, although elected from rearranged districts, need be no less representative than it is or has been. Other countries have done all right under national governments without sacrifice of democracy, and, moreover, this Government, which we still fondly regard as a union of sovereign States, has already encroached so far on the original rights of the members, that a States-righter of a hundred years ago wouldn't recognize it now.

I hear Hoosiers and Suckers and Hayhawks who live and thrive in New York boasting of their undying sentiment and of their clannishness in business, a spirit not entirely unlike that of the race-true, immigrant Nazi, but I notice that they never go back to Indiana, Illinois ,or Kansas, and that they vote in the New York elections and make themselves thoroughly at home. The truth is that any American may be at home in any State, and that State lines and rights are both an illusion and an obstruction, and certainly not worth the expense in cost or progress.

They exist to preserve political organizations, multiple jobs, graft and inefficiency, and in some cases to provide sanctuaries for tax-dodgers.

• • • •

BUT WHEN it comes time to bridge Goose Creek or build a high school or make houses wholesale for Mr. Roosevelt's submerged third, all domestic obligations by any honest concept of the States' reason and right to exist, they are entirely willing to let old Sam do it.

New York, Connecticut and a few other good States would gain little and might lose a little, but in a general comparison the Federal government is much better than that of the States and incomparably more honest.

And, anyway, we have been backing into this change for years. I suggest the advisability of facing the entire question.

The Once Over

By
H. I. Phillips

Dr. Roosevelt Sees The Patient Again.

Dr. Roosevelt—What's this hurry call for? Didn't you hear me tell you that you were in perfect health?

Uncle Sam—I heard you, but I thought you might be speaking from hearsay.

Dr. Roosevelt—I hope you're not stubborn enough to dispute a doctor when he tells you you have never felt better in your life.

Uncle Sam—It's all right if the doctor wants to fool the patient, but I don't see any percentage in a patient fooling the doctor.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—What's the matter with you now, anyhow?

Uncle Sam—Take my word for it, I've had a relapse.

Uncle Sam—I didn't think you'd believe me.

Uncle Sam—I don't; but I think you're entitled to a second warning.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—You DO look a little pale. Maybe it's something you ate.

Uncle Sam—With food prices where they are, what makes you think I've been eating?

Dr. Roosevelt—What are your symptoms? Are you having your old headaches again?

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—Do you think I should change your medicines?

Uncle Sam—I certainly do.

Dr. Roosevelt—Let me see . . . what have I been giving you?

Uncle Sam—What HAVEN'T you been giving me!

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—I had a bad tooth.

Uncle Sam—I noticed you had it yanked out at once instead of trying to demonstrate that it would be all right if left in under Government supervision.

Dr. Roosevelt—Don't be sarcastic. I still don't think you are in as bad shape as you claim.

Uncle Sam—How sick have I got to be before you will be convinced?

• • • •

Uncle Sam—You haven't taken my pulse in months.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—But it was all so sudden.

Uncle Sam—That's what you think. I felt bad all summer.

Dr. Roosevelt—Why didn't you notify me?

Uncle Sam—I couldn't break in on your itinerary.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt—Why, oh why, did I go in for so much doctoring, anyhow?

Uncle Sam—You're asking ME!

A lovely boy, any way you take him . . . and you can take him!

Correspondent Reports Calm Resulting From Quiet Cantonal Elections Waning In Face Of Rising Living Costs.

By Jacques Kayser.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WITH THE COMING of autumn France faced a new cycle of difficulties. October, this year, was clearly a month of transition between the "breathing spell" of last summer and the testing time of November. During the first half of the month, that is until the eve of the cantonal elections, the atmosphere was favorable. But later the political barometer began to go down. Nonetheless the cantonal elections were for all Frenchmen a comforting development.

It had often been repeated, particularly by the Communists, that France was threatened by a Fascist coup d'etat and by the Fascists that the Communists were up to some deviltry. Thus the moderates had reason to fear that the electoral campaign was about to serve as a pretext for a mobilization of extremist forces with the likelihood of an open clash between the working class and the organizations of Fascist tendencies.

Well, in the nation as a whole—with the sole exception of Marseille, the classic city of election day disturbances, the city where the dead are voted in larger numbers than the living—the most complete calm reigned. It was clear proof that civil war in France is certainly not just over the horizon. Actually nobody wants it. And that is the outstanding conclusion to be drawn from the October balloting.

In fact, the election resulted in a defeat for the extremists, both on the Right and the Left. While the Communists increased their vote and captured a few additional seats over those held previously, these gains were minor. As for the parties of the Right, they, too, lost ground.

Government Parties Said Victors In Last Elections.

THE VICTORS in the cantonal elections were the government parties, opposed to revolution and in favor of national as well as international peace. French democracy—there is renewed proof of this in the elections—is much more healthy and stronger than ever.

Thus, on the morrow of the cantonal balloting the feeling among the masses was one of reassurance. The newspapers were unanimous in congratulating the nation on the results; the stock exchange was strong and the franc regained some lost ground. In the subways and on the buses one encountered men and women who seemed to have had a great load lifted from their minds.

But it was not long before the revival of hope in France began to wane. It has not disappeared altogether. But the mood has not been sustained at the high level to which it had been brought.

Why did this happen? In the first place—I might almost say it has been the sole reason—there was the constant increase in the cost of living. Taking the price level of 1930 as a standard (i. e., 100) the cost of living fell to 77.8 in November, 1935; it is now 107. Certainly, the peasants who total, as everybody knows, the majority in France, are very much satisfied with this continual rise in the price of farm products. But in the cities the situation is different. The small businessmen, the workers, those living on invested capital, the pensioners, rising prices have touched these classes in a very vital spot, and to some, such as the rentiers, and the retired class, the situation has become tragic.

They believed that after the wave of inflation which marked the evil years of 1934 and 1935, the Popular Front to whom they had given their support, might bring about an easing in their situations or in any case achieve a measure of stability. They have since discovered that nothing of the sort has happened and that their modest resources are no longer sufficient to enable them to maintain their standards of living.

Government employes, too, have found the situation difficult and have protested warmly with the result that the regime has been forced to include in the next budget an item of more than 1,000,000,000 francs for salary increases. Even that has not been enough to stop the grumbling and there is now a movement to compel the government to introduce a sliding scale of wages based upon the cost of living. Nor can the possibility of a strike of functionaries be ruled out.

Social Unrest Provokes Uncertainty In Populace.

As for the workers of the Paris area, particularly the metal workers, they have begun to agitate for new contracts with the threat of a strike held over the heads of the employers, even if it is only a "symbolic" strike of 24 hours or less. The most violent talk of a general strike, but this group finds little support among the rank and file of workers.

THIS REVIVAL of social unrest is resulting in an increase in uncertainity. The public, while understanding that the workers are sometimes compelled to resort to the strike as a means of putting pressure on reactionary employers, is not willing to view the strike as anything but an exceptional weapon and even if not directly affected by certain stoppages, many Frenchmen are profoundly disturbed by the growth of social conflict.

The differences between the parties on this problem is a difference over whether there should or should not be a change in the social and economic structure of France. The Socialists and Communists argue for such a change; the Radicals, Premier Camille Chautemps among them, oppose it. The latter regards such a course as dangerous and basically futile.

The party par excellence of French democracy, the Radical Socialists, is no partisan of nationalization. They favor a middle-of-the-road course between a liberty which may degenerate to anarchy and a totalitarian regime which suppresses freedom. Their plan is, as defined in the party manifesto of October 31, "control of the nation over its economy."

Edouard Daladier, minister of national defense, elaborated this point of view in a formula which suits the temper of the French middle class. "We are," he said, "for an individualism which prevents the human being from being regimented either under a dictatorship of men or of a bureaucracy."

Is such a formula acceptable to the Socialists? The congress of that party indicated that the answer was largely in the negative. Yet the Socialists are unwilling to smash the Popular Front.

In the meantime, however, the Fascist elements in France are revealing a profound disunity. They are at the moment more divided than ever. Until now the most important and most dynamic Fascist element was the Croix de Feu of Col. de la Rocque. It could be said that, in general, except for the small group following Jacques Doriot, Col. de la Rocque was looked upon as the Fuehrer of all those who wanted to see France throw over the democratic republic.

He always said, to use his own words, that he would move to action "when the clock struck the hour." But neither his antirepublican friends nor his republican enemies saw the hour strike. Even his most intimate collaborators reproached him for his inaction and began against him a violent campaign of abuse. This campaign was not carried very far when, suddenly, it led to the unexpected intervention of former Premier Andre Tardieu.

SEVERAL YEARS AGO M. Tardieu resigned as deputy and openly renounced politics. He made his reappearance as an opponent of De la Rocque. He accused the latter of having, for a period of some months, allowed himself to be financed out of the government's secret funds.

These secret funds are relatively small sums placed at the disposal of the minister of the interior to be used by him at his discretion without having to render an account of them to anyone but the president of the republic. Because of their "secret" character it is forbidden to those who distribute them to reveal the identity of the beneficiaries. This rule has always been observed but now M. Tardieu has broken it. He has let it be known that over a prolonged period he helped finance M. de la Rocque and the Croix de Feu out of this secret budget.

In France those who are the recipients of these secret funds are almost always looked upon with disfavor and suspicion. Obviously, therefore, M. Tardieu's revelations were intended to discredit De la Rocque who had placed on his banner the slogan: "Honor and Probity."

M. Tardieu affirms; M. de la Rocque denies. The court has heard the accusation and the defense and is soon to render its judgment. For republicans, it makes little difference whether Tardieu is a liar or De la Rocque a receiver of subsidies. What is important for them is the split in the ranks of their adversaries, the touch of scandal which smears them all and which considerably weakens the Fascist forces.

And that is another reason for continuing to believe that France is basically stable and despite superficial dangers the strength and soundness of the country is as great as in the past.

Shanghai Crisis

By Barnet Nover

The Japanese Take Over.

RICHEST of all the prizes which Japan has ever gained through conquest is the City of Shanghai, China's metropolis and the fifth greatest port in the world.

Korea, Formosa, Southern Saghalin, the islands of the South Pacific that were taken from Germany—these and other parts of the overseas empire of the Mikado may have their value to Japan. But none of these colonies nor all of them together are as valuable as the city which the Japanese recently conquered from China and which, from all indications, they now plan to rule.

• • • •

Even Manchuria, for all its vast acres and its glittering agricultural and mineral resources, constitutes a much less glittering prize than the city on the Whangpoo.

AFTER ALL, Japan's balance sheet with respect to Manchuria, is still written in red ink.

Millions have been poured into the puppet state. But millions more must be invested there before Manchuria ceases being a liability and becomes an asset. To be sure, a relative handful of high-placed Japanese have made and are making millions out of Manchuria's railroad's, mines, timber lands, soy bean exports, etc. An additional number have managed to make their homes there as functionaries, settlers, soldiers.

But by and large, Manchuria's present importance is that of a claim staked out for posterity. For the present generation of Japanese the conquest of Manchuria has meant a steadily increasing burden of taxes to pay the costs of developing the resources of the disguised colony and for the maintenance of a huge garrison to fight "bandits" and serve as a barrier against Russia. Because of that conquest and the need of consolidating it, Japan has wasted its substance.

• • • •

SHANGHAI is something else again. The most highly industrialized of all Chinese cities, with a population of close to 4,000,000, it is the bottle-neck through which flows the trade of the outside world with the rich and populous Yangtze Valley. Whoever controls Shanghai is in a position to control that trade. The same power would also be in a position to dominate any and every Chinese government whether its capital be Nanking, Hankow or some other city in the interior. For the customs revenue that has flowed into the Chinese treasury from the Shanghai area has constituted the principal source of Chinese governmental funds. And a large additional sum has also come from Shanghai by way of taxes on tobacco and luxuries.

Deprived of these revenues, a Chinese government could, perhaps, continue to exist. But it would no longer be able, as was the nationalist government during the last few years, to undertake a large reconstruction program.

• • • •

IT IS CLEAR from all this why, in the first place, Japan is determined to exercise at Shanghai those functions of sovereignty previously exercised by the Chinese government and why, secondly, the outside powers are determined to use every peaceful means to preserve their own rights and interests in Shanghai.

Hitherto Shanghai has been at one and the same time a Chinese city and an international city. No nation in the past questioned China's claim to sovereignty over it. On the other hand, that sovereignty was, in practice, limited by long standing arrangements. The result was a situation of extraordinary complexity. Nonetheless the system worked with some degree of satisfaction both to China and to the foreign interests.

The Chinese directly governed certain parts of Shanghai such as Nantao, Pootung, Chapei which were included in what is known as the "Greater City" of Shanghai. They also maintained government offices in the International Settlement for the administration of the postal service, radio communications, finance and customs, although the latter, while under Chinese jurisdiction, has actually been administered by an extremely efficient international body known as the Chinese Maritime Customs headed by a British inspector general.

The government of the International Settlement has been for many years in the hands of those paying land taxes or, as the British say, the ratepayers. At one time this group was limited to Occidentals and only Occidentals were elected to the Shanghai municipal council. But during recent years places have been found on that body for Chinese and Japanese as well.

And there is the French Concession which is ruled by the French government through its consul general.

NOW WHATEVER disadvantages the Shanghai system may have had, and there is much to be said against it, it did have certain advantages. It served China as an oasis of relative peace in times of civil strife and internal anarchy. And it served the world by keeping open the Open Door. The very fact that Shanghai, China's greatest port, was an international city, made it difficult for any nation to secure exclusive privileges there and exercise any dominance over China's trade.

No wonder, then, that the United States, Great Britain and France have sent strong notes of protest to Japan over its pretensions to sovereignty at Shanghai, its claim, as expressed by a spokesman of the Japanese foreign office that Shanghai is a "piece of mortgaged property" and particularly its determination to take over and administer the customs. For if as a result of Japan's high-handed action the western powers are forced out of Shanghai it will mean in effect being forced out of China. Retreat for them is no longer possible. They must now stand their ground or clear out altogether.

Thus the military struggle at Shanghai, in which the Japanese were victorious, has now been followed by a diplomatic struggle of equal moment. Only this time Japan's antagonist is not Nanking but Washington, London and Paris. On the outcome of this struggle the future not only of China but of all Asia and possibly of the entire world may depend.

A Great Director

By William Lyon Phelps

Ames And The Theater.

The death of Winthrop Ames last month removed one of the finest personalities in the American Theater; and one of the most influential.

In 1908, when the New Theater was founded in New York, Winthrop Ames was chosen as its director; and the plays given in that theater and the manner in which they were given, were alike splendid and distinguished.

It was a turning-point in the history of the American stage. Before this experiment, Americans looked abroad to Moscow, Berlin, Vienna, Prague and Paris in order to learn how to produce plays; to find what team-acting meant; how actors could be trained not to become stars, but to co-operate in a company where the sole aim was to produce a play intelligently and effectively.

• • • •

But after the experiment of the New Theater, which was a magnificent success in every way except financially, these ideals were all realized in New York; and the American stage never went back to its crudities.

Winthrop Ames gave his audiences not only fine productions, but fine plays. His Shakespearean productions—notably "Winter's Tale"—were the best I had ever seen; and among new plays, never shall I forget Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird." Galsworthy's "Stripe," and "Don," by Rudolf Besier, who 26 years later was to capture England and America with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

• • • •

There was a charming incident one Christmas week, when, years after the closing of the New Theater, Mr. Ames directed a series of revivals of Gilbert and Sullivan. After the conclusion of the performance one evening, the leading actor came forward and called attention to the coming of Christmas; and suggested that, as they had been singing Sullivan's music, it would be a good idea for the company and the audience to unite in singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" to the tune written by Sullivan.

No evangelist ever had a more enthusiastic response.

In Re Parachute Jump.

316 W. Leicester St.,

November 7, 1937.

Mr. Tom McCarthy,
The Washington Post,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Mr. McCarthy:

For some mornings I have been reading your varied experiences in The Post and the thought recently occurred to me that I have a hobby which might furnish you the basis for a very interesting Monday morning discourse.

I have noticed that you take advantage of unusual situations and my droll imagination leads me to believe that what I have in mind might be unusually interesting to you.

Would you and your paper be interested in making a parachute jump? It could be arranged for some near Sunday afternoon at Queens Chapel Airport in Washington. If you feel this idea has merit and are sufficiently interested to write me, I will be only too glad to go into details and make preparations for your jump. Hoping to hear from you at your earliest convenience, I am,

Very truly yours,
(Signed) GEORGE DE GRANGE.

Mr. George de Grange,

Dear Mr. De Grange:

Well, sir, an offer such as yours certainly appeals to me. For myself, I can say that I'm all for making the parachute jump.

However, you asked in your letter if the paper would be interested in making the jump. I really don't know about that, but I'm sure even the Sunday edition would be less battered than I would . . . should the chute fail to open. (Ha! Ha!)

But, seriously, Mr. De Grange, I'm all for the idea. However, I must hold up my decision for a day or two until I can get the official O. K. from the paper. Inasmuch as I have never made a parachute jump, you can realize how I anticipate it.

I am sure appreciative of your kind offer and hope I can reciprocate in turn, should the jump go through.

Very truly yours,
TOM McCARTHY.

Dear Capt. Armstrong:

Some fellow wants me to make a parachute jump. I haven't given him the final word as yet. I wanted to get a little inside information before I went through with it.

Since you've been a flyer for a good many years, I suppose you've had occasion to make parachute jumps. I'd like to get the low-down on this right away.

Awaiting your answer impatiently, I am,
Very truly yours,
TOM McCARTHY.

Inter-office Memo.

Dear Boss:

I've just received a letter from someone who wants me to make a parachute jump.

Between you and me, I'm just a little on the leery side. I, personally, think it would make a very graceful out if you just withhold the paper's permission to make the jump.

Of course, as you understand, I have no particular qualms in the matter. The only thing that bothers me is the inevitability of such jumps. The chute either opens . . . or it doesn't. I don't like to contemplate the last-named possibility. McCARTHY.

Mr. Tom McCarthy,

Dear Tom:

Received your note in regard to parachute jump. Have made several myself and they're quite a sensation. I'm sure you'd get a big kick out of it.

You know it's no easy job. You jump and the wind gets hold of you and you lose a lot of breath. Then you've got to remember to count ten and pull the rip-cord.

Go ahead, by all means. It's worth trying once.
(Signed) J. B. ARMSTRONG.

P. S.—Don't forget to pull the rip-cord.

Got your note on the parachute jump. Am all for it. Swell stunt. Full permission to go ahead. Ought to make swell column. THE BOSS.

Mr. George de Grange,
Winchester, Va.
Dear Mr. De Grange:

Honest, I hate to disappoint you in regard to your generous offer to fix me up for a parachute jump. As you could gather from my first communication with you, I was all for it.

But you know how such things are. There are always people with old-fashioned ideas, who have the silly notion that such things are dangerous. And you can't do anything with such people.

When I first received your kind offer, I went right to the boss to get the official O. K. As you know, I felt a very personal desire to make the jump.

But there was absolutely no convincing him. He put his foot down and said that the paper would have nothing to do with such a stunt.

Of course, that took the matter out of my hands and, much as I regret it, there's absolutely nothing I can do. However, thanks again for your kind offer.

Happy landings!

Very truly yours,
TOM McCARTHY.

The couples who took part in the opening play seemed friendly enough. There was a crowd of more than 350, called by tournament officials the biggest turnout in national tournament history. Whether the good spirits that prevailed last night will continue through the whole week's play is another matter.

One thing is certain, however. Misdeals and trumped aces will lead to no petulant tearing up of cards. The 200 decks which the players use are of a new non-tearable composition.

Culbertson was the center of attraction, although he did not play last night. He stood at the entrance to the Shoreham ballroom with the scores of other kibitzers, probably looking for material for his books among the 85 hands that were being played simultaneously.

1,000 Letters Daily.

He and his wife receive more than 1,000 letters a day from bridge fans all over the world, he says. "It costs us $30,000 a year just to be polite, because we have to hire experts to answer their questions."

There's one other thing besides bridge on which he and Mrs. Culbertson agree entirely—their children. Their 8-year-old son was born in one of the epochal periods of bridge history and as a result will go through life as Bruce Jump Bid Culbertson. Fifi, their daughter, is 9.

The opening session was Washington Bridge Leagues Night. A non-championship game, it served to introduce Washingtonians to the out-of-town celebrities. Sharing the spotlight with Culbertson were Mrs. Donald Tansill of New York and Waldemar von Zedwitz, Austrian baron who gave up his title to become an American citizen and ranks among the country's leading players.

Arrangements for the curtain-raiser were made by Mrs. E. B. Swanson of Washington, chairman of the National Tournament executive committee and the first woman ever to hold that office.

Leading Women Here.

The outstanding women players of the country are entered for today's team game at 2 p. m. Mrs. Robert Fuller captains the team that won the Charles E. Coffin trophy in the Chicago tournament last year, other members of which are Mrs. Mabel Ervin, Miss Florence Stratford and Mrs. Al Sobel. Washington women competed against Mrs. Fuller when she played in the District championships with Mrs. William McKenney. Mrs. Olive Peterson, of Philadelphia, also is well known here.

The Baltimore team was formed through elimination games in the Maryland Women's Bridge League. Mrs. Edward Behrend and Mrs. Emil Koethers qualified with a score of more than 59 per cent in eight games. Mrs. Stanley Davis and Mrs. Charles Woolsey, who complete the team, were a few points behind.

Pittsburgh is sending a team composed of Mrs. Hilda Stahl, Miss Janet Hardie, Miss Margaret Beech, and Miss Clara Morris. The "official ladies" team consists of Mrs. W. E. McKenney, Mrs. Albert Rockwell, Mrs. Allan Rutherford, and Mrs. E. B. Swanson. The Mayfair Club of New York has an entry, and Mrs. L. C. Urquart, of Ithaca, will captain a foursome from Cornell.

Two of Washington's leading women players, Mrs. J. H. Lemon and Mrs. M. R. West, have an intercity team with Mrs. R. C. Young, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Lewellyn Lord, of Baltimore. Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker, chairman of the championship, paired with Mrs. W. S. Athey, will combine with Mrs. Zontline and Mrs. Tiechman, who were the women champions in 1936. Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter, runners-up in the District championships, have formed a team with Mrs. C. Murray Hall and Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh, with Mrs. Ralph Woodside as fifth member. Mrs. Pat McCarran will play with Mrs. Lillian Leddy, teamed with Mrs. Paul Golden and Mrs. Mazie Fields, the latter from Philadelphia. Mrs. R. Robins, Mrs. F. Samuel, Mrs. C. W. Zimmer, and Mrs. A. J. Steinberg are one of the few purely local quartets.

The game this afternoon will be the first session of the women's team championship. Finals will be played tomorrow afternoon at the same hour.

Simultaneously with the women's game another event will be in progress, with competition limited to newspaper men. Instead of a trophy the winner will receive a typewriter as an award. An individual movement will be used, every player playing with, and against, every other player. It will take two sessions to determine the winner and the event will be concluded tomorrow afternoon.

The mixed pair championship, in which a man and a woman play together, will be decided at the evening session, starting at 8:30. The second session will be tomorrow evening, and the finals on Thursday afternoon.

A radio broadcast, from 6:30 until 6:45, over Station WJSV started the festivities last evening. William McKenney, secretary of the national league, acted as interviewer. His subjects were Ely Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon, and Waldemar von Zedwitz. Lemon, a Washingtonian, is first vice president of the league.

Four local players emerged winners in the first of the eight sections played last night. They were Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, North-South, and Mrs. Thomas Brahany and Mrs. Bolivar Lloyd, East-West.

Doctors in Double Attack on Clinic

The Group Health Association, Inc., is practicing medicine, and at the same time operating an insurance business, was the contention contained in a brief filed with Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal by the District Medical Society, it was learned yesterday.

In an opposition brief the HOLC, through General Counsel Horace Russell, has denied that the G. H. A. was practicing medicine or operating as a business concern, it also was learned.

The health clinic, the HOLC brief stated, was performing a "service" for the employes who are members of the GHA.

A conference has been scheduled later this week between Seal and Garnett to solve the controversy.

D. C. Banks to Stop Paying Interest on Christmas Savings

Faced with the alternative of doing away with Christmas savings clubs next year or discontinuing payment of interest on the accounts, local bankers have decided to discontinue the interest, it was announced yesterday. So for the first time in the 25-year history of the local Christmas club movement, members will receive no interest when they collect their savings in 1938.

Thomas J. Groom, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, explained that "for some years banks have recognized the fact that the cost of handling Christmas savings clubs exceeded the gross income earned from the investment of such funds."

Payment of interest on the club accounts already has been discontinued in 89 per cent of the country's banks, Groom explained.

A-WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 29.

LITTLE Dr. Dafoe has just mushed in from Callender, Ontario, and made us all the happier for his presence—that is, when we can catch him.

ALICE HUGHES.

For the quintuplets' guiding star is not too easy to line up when he emerges from the woods and hits the big town. He likes the bright lights, and things, when he gets out of his devoted exile with those five famous babies. He is wined, dined and fussed over, and I am glad to say that in spite of all the adulation he still remains the same sweet, simple, unaffected little country medico he was five years ago. Nothing has so far turned his head.

He loves night clubs, their noise and pretty women. And why not? Most of his life is spent keeping sniffles away from five amazing children. He leads an astonishingly lonely life up there, with few people to talk to, and when he does get away to address a few medical meetings, he loves and deserves his freedom.

I managed to grab the Doc off for tea the other day, since Toni and Forrest Davis are two of his favorite people. Other girls were present—Ishbell Ross, one of the greatest of reporters, and Mary Scandrett, a beautiful blonde girl who is also a mother. And what did we all talk about to this little doctor whom fate pointed at? Why, our children, of course! He took it like a little major, giving us advice from his deep fund of common sense, not looking bored.

• • • •

But I'm sure that the little medical man from the tall timbers, fed to the teeth with thinking of children's problems, had his mind on the floor show at the International Casino while we were questioning him. And who shall blame him? Not I, for one!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, this is the end of November, and I don't know how you have fared, but it has been the most beautiful month we New Yorkers have ever spent. What a fall! of course, it has had its griefs. The old gentleman caught a horrid cold at the football game between the local Giants and the Green Bay Packers, and Young Martin has been in deep disgrace because of his tardiness at school, still it was a marvelous month! . . . .

• • • •

I saw Eva LeGallienne lunching at the Algonquin the other day—Eva, whose theatrical ambition seems to outstretch her capabilities! She still wears Greenwich Villagey clothes, and she looks unhealthy and unhappy. . . .

The big fashion futures show had an exciting moment, true to the theater, when a curtain behind the scenes caught fire. And true to the traditions of show business, dear old Lew Lehr, the comicker from the news reels, stepped forth and amused the 2,000 people until the smoke was gone. Lew did a great job on the number I plotted—the ten women since the century's turn who have most influenced fashion. I began with Lillian Russell, and ran through Irene Castle, Clara Bow, Garbo, the Duchess of you know who, right through the sure-fire Quints, and Lehr did his stuff. It went fine. . . .

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Tuberculosis Prevention.

I saw an elderly man who had been in the hospital 15 years ago. His record says that at that time he had tuberculosis of the lung, with cavitation. At the present time he is in on account of dropsy from a weak heart. He is nearly 70 years old. The case proves, if it proves nothing else, that tuberculosis is not necessarily a fatal disease, and with proper care people will go on and live out their life expectancy and die, as this man may, of some other condition.

Our outlook on tuberculosis is far more cheerful than the outlook of our fathers and grandfathers. Most cases can be cured, or at least arrested, so that the victims can lead a normal and comfortable life.

The most important element in attaining this object has not been any special improvement in treatment, but improvement in our means of finding cases and getting them for treatment at an early stage. It would probably have surprised the forerunners of the movement, such as Dr. Trudeau, Breymer and Detweiler, and struck them with astonishment, to think that in every State in the Union there is a sanitarium provided for the care of people with tuberculosis, and in some States there are many of these.

Sanitarium care is highly desirable for every case, if possible, although many of them can be treated at home and are successfully treated at home. The main elements of treatment are to put the lung at rest and to improve nutrition. Bed rest is considered absolutely necessary for at least six months to two years, and if improvement does not occur rapidly under these circumstances, some form of surgical rest for the lung is recommended.

Medicines are of little, if any, good, and anyone who peddles medicines for tuberculosis with the promise that it will effect a cure is an enemy of society. Medicines, of course, are used improve the general tone of the body and help the anemia and to improve appetite and reduce cough, but these are merely symptomatic and not curative.

The greatest advantage of the sanitarium is probably for the rest of the community, because in the first place it takes a tuberculosis individual out of circulation until his disease is closed (an "open" case is defined as one who is coughing and breathing out the germs of tuberculosis in his sputum) and it also teaches him to take care of himself so that he is not a menace to others. This is done by teaching him to cough always with a paper napkin in front of his mouth, to expectorate only in a sputum cup or napkin, and to see that the sputa are burned.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Birds on Neckties.

New York (AP).—John James Audobon, who painted pictures of birds that look more realistic than the birds, is being immortalized in neckwear. They're making ties in 12-color combinations based on his depiction of the feathers of pheasants, wild geese, etc. Game birds' plumage also is the alleged inspiration for a new line of hats in mottled color mixtures.

How to Obtain Smart Clothes At Lowest Cost

Plan Before You Buy and Choose the Simple, Classic Raiment.

NEW YORK (AP)—Business girls can get the smartest winter clothes for the least amount of money by following these rules:

Think your wardrobe through before you buy.

Choose simple, classic clothes and do your fashion tricks with accessories.

Have your clothes altered to fit well even if you have to do it yourself.

Coat to Handkerchiefs.

That is the counsel of Mrs. Dorothy Anderson, director of Business Girls' Shops in one of Manhattan's largest department stores (John Wanamaker's).

"Too many girls buy a dress without stopping to think where they are going to wear it or whether it harmonizes with anything else they own," she says. "The result is a hodgepodge. The only way to be well-dressed for little money is to think your wardrobe through from coat to handkerchiefs and choose each thing to fill a definite place.

"The smartest fashion effects come from classic clothes (which aren't dated after one wearing), coupled with smart accessories which can change the costume's appearance. This year, for instance, a wide suede belt, a colored jacket or gold jeweled accents can make one simple frock look like three different outfits."

The things a business girl's winter wardrobe should include, in Mrs. Anderson's opinion, are a winter coat, two dresses (one wool and the other a simple crepe which can be worn evenings), a black tailored suit, two blouses and two accessory sets of hat, bag, gloves and shoes (one for every day and the other for dressing up). Mrs. Anderson believes one hat should be in some such smart accessory color as rust, paprika or duck green.

Hats Off the Face.

The fashion world votes black the smartest color for the business girl's coat, although brown, green and gray are good. The favorite is a slim, fitted wool finished with revers of Persian lamb.

The crepe frocks which have fashion "It" are black or in deep-toned colors, cut on the season's favorite body-molding lines and given a fashion fillip with piping of gold kid or a shimmering metal clip and buckle.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

What Can Young-Marrieds Do When Both Sets of Parents Try to Preempt All Their Holidays?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Have you any suggestions to offer, at this season of the year, to young-marrieds who are torn between the claims of "his family" and "her family" for filial attendance at Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners? My husband and I, married six years, have never had a chance to start holiday traditions in our own home. My mother usually gets us for these grand occasions and seems to rejoice in the fact that his mother was bested. It usually takes the next half year to smooth out ruffled family feelings resulting from these holiday dilemmas.

• • • •

Aside from this, my husband and I, in spending the whole day visiting "family," miss any calls made by our own friends on the great day, and whatever holiday calling or entertaining we do has to be done before or afterward. I know all that about being glad you have a father and mother. I'm very thankful for mine—but I live in the same town, see them often and always, for at least an hour, every holiday and most Sundays.

• • • •

This year, my sister (also married) and I were going to suggest a progressive Christmas breakfast in our respective homes and wind up at our parents' for the traditional Christmas breakfast dish. We thought it a clever idea for having Christmas with "the family" and yet leaving us the afternoon for dinner at home with our husbands' families and for entertaining friends. But we were told with finality on Thanksgiving Day that mother had ordered a 20-pound turkey for Christmas and that we were to keep the day open. Needless to say, the progressive-breakfast idea was never mentioned.

• • • •

I suppose we could have our friends in for breakfast, but the fact remains that we are not free agents and it's not the actual dining with our parents that we object to so much as their tacit insistence that we belong to them and not to ourselves. It's a case of "You must! We won't take 'no' for an answer."

• • • •

I'm not as unsentimental as I sound. Before I was married I was unavoidably away from home on holidays, and I pined and sighed for home, sweet home. But that was before I felt the desire to create—on my own and for my own—a holiday procedure that represented my own and my husband's feelings about the day. Now we want to plan a day that is really ours. There are many sides to this question, and I am not overlooking the elderly parents' side, but I think they are being selfish in taking the attitude that the day is theirs, and theirs alone. What do you think? What do you suggest? Am I a brazen ingrate for feeling as I do?

MRS. W.

Wise Planning Needed.

DEAR MRS. W.: If you weren't, actually, a trifle more complacent than dismayed over your tremendous desirability as Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner guests, I feel sure you could have solved this problem with some degree of effectiveness long ago. To begin with, an exquisite sense of courtesy impels fair play all around. Given this, you would never have permitted your own mother to have bested your husband's mother in the number of holidays she feasted you at her board. No, indeed. If your mother had you for Thanksgiving dinner one year, you would have seen to it that his mother had you either for the alternate anniversary, or for the same anniversary the following year. You would have insisted on this—in fairness, in courtesy. Whoever objected to this arrangement would have been discrediting himself. The parents would have had to fall in line.

• • • •

Furthermore, in accepting engagements invitations to Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner, it is perfectly permissible to insert a self-protective, qualifying clause, as: "We'd adore to come. We'd counted on coming. But we've got to run at the stroke of 4. We're having a few friends in from 5 to 7, you know, and Jim's family's coming for dinner at 8." You might therewith politely bemoan the social responsibilities that go with becoming ancestors or householders; any serio-comic chant that softened the blow while clarifying your stand; but your intention would be rendered unmistakeable and binding.

• • • •

Preserving one's inalienable social rights as an adult in this instance, without giving undue offense to either set of parents, is a matter of far-sighted, clear-headed, detailed planning. Perhaps a lazy disinclination to take the bull by the horns soon enough; a secret wish, really, that somebody will take your holiday plans out of your hands, is responsible for the fact that you have no holiday home-life of your own. I realize it isn't easy to be dined out in midday in the grand manner and come home to handle one's own parties, yet able hostesses of the modern variety are performing similar miracles every day and you can do the same, if your heart is set on it.

• • • •

Since you are already signed up for Christmas dinner with your own family this year, I suppose you'll have to see it through without resisting. But starting with the New Year, work out, in collaboration with your sister, some plan of entertaining and being entertained which takes just and tactful account of the whole ramified family picture. If you want Christmas day for your very own—and it is, indisputably, the traditional home-keeping day—say so and plan accordingly. Start a precedent, if you like, beginning with 1938, of spending alternate Thanksgiving Days with your own and your husband's families. You can make it up to the other branch of the family by a special Father's Day or Mother's Day dinner—or a birthday festival, whatever fits in best with family custom.

• • • •

In reserving Christmas Day at home for yourselves, you may see your own parents, who live nearby, on Christmas Eve or Christmas night either at your home or theirs for dinner, and have your husband's parents (if they live out of town) as overnight guests. At least, you can urge this hospitality upon them as insistently as they urge their midday dining upon you. If they choose to decline, to be hurt, you'll simply have to deal with them with that firm, affectionate kindliness one must sometimes employ with a sulky child.

M. H.

Table Decorations.

Many fall flowers available at the market make excellent winter table decorations. The bitter-sweet, Chinese lanterns, hydrangia and corn flowers can be arranged in interesting combinations to provide graceful units in the living room or hall table.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

SO MUCH mystery is thrown around the screen and stage stars that we always wonder what they are like, off-screen and backstage. Sylvia Sidney is a nice girl . . . you would like her.

This young tragedienne, who weeps such big tears in the movies, is not at all like that, really. She is unaffectedly gay and surprisingly frank. I got a jolt when I asked what exercises she does to keep her lovely figure.

"Oh, I hate exercises," she said quickly. "I just couldn't do those awful ups and downs!"

"Do you ride a bicycle," I asked hopefully.

"Not if I can help it," was the prompt reply. "I tried once, but I fell off into a cactus plant." I could see her point but we were getting nowhere and it was almost curtain time for "To Quito and Back," her Broadway play.

"Well, what do you do when you are not acting?" I asked in desperation.

"Why, I ride horseback and swim, and I love to walk. I can walk a mile in 12 minutes. But I don't take any exercise."

I recommend Miss Sidney's anti-exercise program to you. She weighs 112 pounds and is a streamlined size 12, height 5 feet 2½ inches.

Whenever anyone says she takes no exercise, all you have to do is look at her figure to tell whether her favorite recreation is bridge or sports. One does not have a good figure by accident. When sports provide the only exercise a person takes you may be fairly certain that she plays regularly and with zest.

It did not occur to Miss Sidney that swimming, riding and walking are exercise, because she gets fun out of doing them. "If I could start over again I would play every game there is, and that is the exercise program I would recommend to every girl," she declared.

The average woman, however, is not a sports enthusiast. She cannot keep her measurements streamlined without specific exercise, and, frankly, I think you can get fun out of a daily dozen. You can turn on the radio and frolic through kicks, twists, bends and stretches that perk up your spirits and circulation. If you can't see any fun in exercise, it's because you have the wrong slant on it. (Pardon me, Miss Sidney!)

STUFFED LIVER ROLLS.

1 pound of pork liver
1 tablespoon of onion
1 tablespoon of bacon drippings
2 cups of bread crumbs
Salt
Pepper
Bacon slices

Have the pork liver cut into thin slices. Pour hot water over the slices and simmer gently for five minutes. Drain. Brown the onion in the bacon drippings. Add the bread crumbs and enough water to moisten. Season with salt and pepper. Roll pieces of liver around the dressing and wrap with strips of bacon. Fasten securely with toothpicks. Place in a casserole. Cover with ½ cup of water. Bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees). Remove the cover during the last 15 minutes of cooking.

Hooded Coats for Winter.

Paris (AP).—Hooded coats made their debuts in recent winter fashion shows here. Among them was a long coat of nutria topped with a tie-on hood of the same fur. Both hood and coat were lined with brown and white checked wool. The hood serves as a hat and is removed for indoor occasions.

Lindsay Dinners Top Diplomatic Social Week

British Ambassador to Entertain Both Tonight and Tomorrow; Henry Hoyts and Miss Lampson at Embassy.

Diplomatic circles, which always set the pace for Washington entertaining, are upholding their reputation for gayety this week, with a number of dinners and receptions planned in the near future, most of them by members of the British colony.

The Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and Lady Lindsay, will entertain at a dinner this evening at the imposing embassy on Massachusetts avenue, and will entertain again there at dinner tomorrow evening. They have as guests Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoyt, cousins of Lady Lindsay, who frequently visit here. Last evening, with Keith Officer, Counselor for Australia of the embassy, they all attended the opening of "Richard II" at the National Theater.

Arriving today for a brief stay at His Majesty's embassy is Miss Mary Lampson, who has been visiting in Baltimore for a few days. She is the daughter of Sir Miles Lampson, distinguished British diplomat, who has been High Commissioner for Egypt since 1934. He previously served as Minister to China and at other posts in the Far East and was for a time High Commissioner of Siberia.

* * * *

Another distinguished English visitor arriving shortly is Sir Evelyn Wrench, journalist and writer, chairman of the Spectator and a founder of the English Speaking Union. He will be accompanied by Lady Wrench, and they will stay at the Willard Hotel. He will address a dinner of the English Speaking Union to be given there on Friday evening in his honor.

Meanwhile, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close have cards out for a reception on Tuesday, December 14, from 4:30 to 7. The party will be in the nature of a housewarming, as Mr. and Mrs. Close expect to move shortly from the Mayflower into the new legation at 3101 Massachusetts avenue. An imposing edifice of white stone, it is furnished largely with fine pieces of stinkwood imported from South Africa.

* * * *

Other members of the Diplomatic Corps who are making plans for parties in the near future are the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom. They will give a luncheon December 7 at the legation in honor of Rolfe de Mare, former director of the Swedish ballets, creator of the International Archives of the Dance and president of the Association of Dance Writers and Critics of France. Under the auspices of Mme. Suzzane Laurent, president of the Art and Travel Society, he will speak on Friday, December 10, at 9:15 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel. His subject will be "The Evolution of the Ballet From 1800 to the Present."

Mr. De Mare, who will stay at the Swedish Legation, has frequently been called one of the most important figures in the dance world of today. As former director of the Swedish ballets, which toured the world over, he was responsible for the creation of more than 25 original ballets in collaboration with the leading painters, composers and librettists of our time. Afterward he became director of the Theatre des Champs Elysees in Paris. His lecture will be accompanied by films and lantern slides as well as selected gramaphone recordings.

Season's 14th Fairfax Hunt To Meet Today

Meets Now Draw Guests From Long Island and Pennsylvania.

This morning early . . . just about the time when most people are wondering who the rascal was who invented alarm clocks . . . the Fairfax hunt will be off and away for the fourteenth meet of the season.

As on their opening day, they will gather at the Kennels, pride of the club's new 90-acre farm on Hunting Mill road, for their dash over hill and dale. Bugles will blow in the traditionally frosty air and pink coats will be out at practically the crack of dawn.

Cards are already in preparation for the next two months of the hunt's winter schedule. Future places of meeting are now in processs of being chosen and all of them have not yet been definitely decided upon.

Chasing Mr. Reynard of Virginia over 6-foot fences has always sounded like pretty exciting sport, but Dr. William McClellan, who, with Reed Thomas, is joint master of the hunt, insists that "things are just going along in a quiet way."

This year marks the hunt's tenth season, and it has established such a cozy niche for itself among other organizations of its kind that guests from Maryland, Long Island and Pennsylvania are frequently on hand for the runs.

After an absence of 2½ years in far-off Siam as Third Secretary to the American Legation there, H. Gordon Minnigerode, son of the Director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, and Mrs. C. Powell Minnigerode, is back in Washington on three months' leave.

Arriving Saturday, he attended the opening of the Sesquicentennial Exhibition with his parents, on the same evening.

Since he has a wide circle of friends here he is already practicing up on "Auld Lang Syne."

Now returned from a three months' cruise around the world, Mrs. Carlton L. Wood has reopened her house on Twenty-eighth street.

Upon her arrival in New York she spent a few days with her mother, Mrs. Richard Sylvester, widow of the one-time superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department of this city. Mrs. Sylvester has lived in New York since his death.

It will be recalled that before her marriage Mrs. Wood was the former Miss Laura Sylvester.

Margot Milham Is Wed in N. Y.

Is Bride of Mr. Hopkins, Son of Washington Resident.

Mrs. Frederick Tracy Milham, of New York, has announced the marriage on Thanksgiving Day of her daughter, Miss Margot Milham, to Douglas Turnbull Hopkins, son of Mrs. Allison Turnbull Hopkins, of New York, and of John Appleton Havens Hopkins, of Washington. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John P. Cuyler, of Calvary Baptist Church, in the apartment of Andrew Gahagan, at 277 Park avenue, New York. Only relatives were present.

On their return from a trip to Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins will reside at 159 East Forty-ninth street in New York. The bride attended St. Margaret's School in Waterbury, Conn., and was graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington. Her husband is a graduate of Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass.

Miss Berkman Wed To Dr. Victor Jaffe

Ceremony Takes Place at Bel Air Courthouse.

Miss Ethel Berkman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Berkman, of Calvert street, Washington, was married yesterday to Dr. Victor Jaffe, son of Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Jaffe, of Somerset, Md. The ceremony took place in the courthouse at Bel Air, Md., and afterward the couple returned immediately to Washington, where they will live.

The bride was educated in this city and is associated with the Treasury Department. Dr. Jaffe attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Eltings Leave.

Mr. and Mrs. Winston Elting, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Darlington, have returned to their home in Lake Forest, Ill.

Gives Luncheon.

Mrs. Harold Walker entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. George Messersmith, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

The Ambassador of Poland, Count Jerzy Potocki, is expected to return to Washington today from New York, where he went to attend a celebration at the Metropolitan Opera House of the first 50 years of Josef Hofmann's career as an artist in America. The distinguished pianist was born in Poland.

Between Courses at Recent Dinner

Underwood & Underwood.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

MRS. ROOSEVELT is not the only person in Washington who likes to square dance. There are several strenuous classes in this rural form of relaxation going on in Washington right now—one for bachelors and spinsters, and several for "younger marrieds." We do not know of any yet for people around the First Lady's age, but perhaps her example will start one.

DUDLEY HARMON.

We see from the pictures that Mrs. Roosevelt did her West Virginia square dancing in ordinary street clothes. The favored costume in Washington for the sport is, for women, long flowing dresses of India print with very full skirts. The men wear anything from Tyrol outfits to Princeton beer suits.

Mrs. John Farr Simmons, the former Caroline Thompson, and Miss Olivia Stokes were mainly responsible, several years ago, for introducing square dancing to Washington. It caught on like mad. Usually the sessions are held from 8:30 to 10:30, and are so strenuous that the participants fall limply into the nearest chair when the fun is finished.

* * * *

A NUMBER OF PEOPLE were lunching yesterday at Mrs. James F. Curtis' former home, the 1925 F Street Club. The place was cheery as usual, even on Blue Monday, with great vases of white roses and chrysanthemums and sun streaming in through open windows.

At one table, Mrs. William Lacy was entertaining a few friends in honor of Miss Leita Amory, niece of Mrs. Amory Perkins, of Middleburg. Miss Amory reports that "The Game," which has been gleefully taken up by New York society, was played at her aunt's home the other evening with great success. So perhaps this favorite indoor sport, which consists in acting out some such phrase as "Life is just a bowl of cherries," while others try to guess the meaning, will really take hold in Washington.

Others at Mrs. Lacy's table were Mrs. F. J. A. Coleby; wife of the newly appointed Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy; Miss Virginia Cook and Miss Elizabeth Adams, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alva Adams, of Colorado. The latter wore a green skirt and hat with a tweed jacket, very becoming to her reddish-colored hair.

* * * *

AT ANOTHER TABLE were Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth and Mrs. Dean Acheson, who introduced her daughter, Miss Jane Acheson, to Capital society at a tea last week. Mrs. Acheson wore a black tailored suit with a double silver fox scarf, and Mrs. Wigglesworth had on a black jacket with a bright blue skirt. A quill in her sports hat was of matching blue. She is the wife of Representative Wigglesworth, of Milton, Mass.

The food served yesterday was something for a gourmet to write about. Imagine, all you who grab a bite in drug stores or cafeterias, a very hot, thin soup, followed by creamed stuffed eggs, spinach of a healthy green shade, crisp lettuce and sliced chicken, and plain rice pudding, so deliciously cooked that one forgot this dish was something which had to be forced down one's throat during nursery days.

* * * *

LATER IN THE DAY to the attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt on Twenty-fourth street. They had asked two or three friends of Mrs. Roger Tuckerman to drop in to see her during her visit here from New York. Mr. Pavenstedt attended Harvard with Mr. Tuckerman.

Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett also entertained for Mrs. Tuckerman yesterday. The former Betty Thompson, she has had a whirl during her Washington visit, and was, from all accounts, the belle of the Dewey ball on Saturday evening. She is leaving today to return to New York, but hopes to come back to Washington often in the future.

Miss Pyles Wed To Mr. McPhail

Rev. J. P. Tyler Officiates at Alexandria Church Marriage.

Miss Garland E. Pyles, of Alexandria, daughter of George W. Pyles and the late Mrs. Pyles, was married November 27 at 8 o'clock to Roy Kenneth McPhail, of Alexandria, son of Mrs. Mabel McPhail, of San Francisco, and the late Mr. McPhail.

Mrs. Betty Hartnell, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Helen Hanes, Mrs. John C. Hamilton, Miss Claire Russell and Miss Mildred Woyak. C. Ray Davidson was best man, and the ushers were L. Schuyler Tounshend, John C. Hamilton, James Buckley and Philip Cole.

After a wedding trip to San Francisco, Mr. McPhail and his bride will reside at the Buckingham Apartments, Arlington, Va. The former attended the University of California and is now studying at Columbia Law School. Mrs. McPhail attended George Washington University.

Tea Party to Honor Dancers in Ballet

Mrs. Arnold Lovejoy Will Entertain at Apartment.

Mrs. Arnold L. Lovejoy will give a tea at her apartment on Columbia road today from 5 to 7 p. m. in honor of Miss Frances Hadkins, Miss Marie Jeanne and Lincoln Kirstein, all of whom are members of the Ballet Caravan, a group of American artists connected with the Metropolitan Opera Company Ballet. The Caravan will appear at 8:15 p. m. December 1 at the Roosevelt High School.

Among those invited to the tea are Mrs. Peter R. Horton, Mrs. John T. Vance, jr., Mrs. J. Newton Brewer, Mrs. Mitchell Marques, Mrs. Charles J. Watts, Miss Eleanor Burg, Mrs. Guy Withers, Mrs. Edna Hilton, Miss Charlotte Klein and Miss Rosita Gostin.

Also Mrs. Walter Nash, Mrs. Anne Yago McGuffey, Mrs. Minnie Frost Rand, Mrs. Andrew J. Snow, Mrs. A. A. Dibble, Mrs. E. C. Robertshaw, Dr. Glen Dillard Gunn and William Newman.

Jane Hanson Rouse's Engagement Announced

Mrs. Mary H. Rouse, of Silver Spring, Md., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jane Hanson Rouse, to Robert Gruenwold, of Oskaloosa, Iowa.

The wedding will take place in the near future.

Miss Rouse was graduated from National Law School last June and Mr. Gruenwold, who holds degrees from several colleges in the East, is at the present time with one of the Government departments in Washington.

Mrs. Kleberg Returning Here

Mrs. Richard M. Kleberg is expected to arrive at the Shoreham Thursday to join Representative Kleberg, who came for the opening of Congress. She is on her way from their home in Corpus Christi, Tex.

Mrs. Dewittt Reed, of Corpus Christi, who arrived at the Shoreham Sunday to spend a week or more in Washington, will entertain for Mrs. Kleberg after her arrival. Mrs. Reed had dinner guests in the Blue Room at the hotel last evening, including Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hobbs, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Chamberlin, Mrs. Edward E. Robbins, Representative Kleberg and George Colbett, of London, England.

* * * *

Mrs. Frederic Chatfield, of Boston, and Mrs. Colley Bell, of New York, are visiting their mother, Mrs. William H. Saunders.

Their many friends here will remember Mrs. Chatfield as Miss Edna Saunders and Mrs. Bell as the former Miss Frances Saunders.

Stanley Washburns Entertained at Tea By Barbara Wright

Miss Barbara Wright, daughter of Mrs. Hamilton Wright, entertained at a tea on Sunday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Washburn, jr., who spent a brief time in Washington. Mrs. Washburn, whose wedding took place recently at Hamilton, Mass., is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Phillips, of Wenham, Mass., and a niece of William Phillips, United States Ambassador to Italy. Mr. Washburn is a cousin of Miss Wright.

The latter returned to Washington recently after a motor trip through the South.

Diplomats to Attend Society's Concert

The Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban, the Commercial Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, and Resid Anamur, first secretary of the Turkish Legation, will be among the guests of honor at the benefit concert to be given tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Slavic-American Society of Music and Fine Arts.

The affair will be at the residence of Mrs. J. J. Mack.

Elena de Sayn, violinist, and Grace Carroll, pianist, will present a program which will include the famous Cesar Franck Sonata.

Lowell Mason Begins Series of Musical Dinners

Lowell Mason, son of the late United States Senator Willian. E. Mason, of Illinois, gave the first of his musical dinners of the season last evening at Wesley Hall.

Among the guests were Senator and Mrs. George Berry, of Tennessee; Senator and Mrs. Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado; Former Federal Judge of the Virgin Islands and Mrs. George W. Williams, the Chief Counsel of the Federal Alcohol Administration and Mrs. Philip Buck, the Special Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. Joseph O'Connell, the Former Chairman of the President's Inaugural Committee and Mrs. Melvin D. Hildreth, Commander B. W. Hogan, U. S. N., and Mrs. Hogan; Mr. and Mrs. Karl Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. MacWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Helsper and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones.

Also present were the following members of the Federal Trade Commission: Col. and Mrs. Charles H. March, Judge and Mrs. Ewin L. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Garland S. Ferguson and Maj. and Mrs. Robert Freer.

As has been his custom in the past, Mr. Mason presented a program in which some historical episode was acted out between musical numbers popular in that particular period.

The episode chosen was the scene of the controversy between the Governors of North Carolina and of the State of Franklin which existed from 1784 to 1788 as an offshoot of North Carolina.

With this as an introJuction, the musical part of the evening "took the floor." Miss Rose d'Amore interpreted the spinet and piano music of the period with Bach's "Jesu" and Haydn's "Variations in F Minor." Sophocles Pappas played the citra, an instrument similar to that used at Mount Vernon in Washington's time.

Maj. H. F. Heywood Goes to England To Spend Vacation

Maj. Henry Frank Heywood, Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy, will leave this week for a vacation in England. He will be gone about two months. During his absence his home at 2608 Thirty-sixth place will be occupied by the Financial Counselor of the embassy and Mrs. Noel Trentham, who have been residing at the Shoreham since their recent marriage.

Mrs. Heywood left for England several weeks ago, having been called there by the illness of her father.

Mrs. J. M. Waters Is Tea Hostess

Mrs. John Mitchell Waters yesterday afternoon was hostess at a travel tea at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of her guests from abroad, Mme. Madiou, of Paris; Miss Joy Burley, of Sydney, Australia, and A. Hibbler, of The Hague, Holland. Mrs. Waters, who is travel section chairman of the Woman's City Club, gives such a party each year.

Parisian gowns prevailed in the receiving line. Mrs. Waters wore black velvet and a necklace of pearls; Mme. Madiou also was in black; Miss Burley wore green velvet, and Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard was in black.

An entertaining program added to the foreign atmosphere. Mrs. Howard, widely known lecturer, spoke briefly on European "high lights," and soloists of Mercado's Mexican Ensemble provided the music. Outstanding in the ensemble were Jose Rubio, leading tenor of the National Opera Company of Mexico, and Senorita Sarita, virtuoso on the salterio—Mexican zither. Miss Christine Kelly, youthful pianist, daughter of Mrs. Agnes Kelly and talented pupil of Mme. Coutinho, also played several selections.

Flags of the various nations added gay colors to the yellow and white decorations. Chrysanthemum corsages, blending with the color scheme, were worn by those assisting the hostess. They were Mrs. W. Wallace Chiswell, Miss Marjorie Webster, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch, Mrs. Morgan Bradford, Mrs. George W. Phillips, Mrs. A. F. Coleman, Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, Mrs. Raleigh Dawson, Miss Marguerite Merigold, Mrs. Dorothy Cook, Mrs. Francis Hildebrand, Miss Viola Wildermuth, Miss Daisy Reed, Miss Marion Price, Mrs. George B. Mathews, Mrs. Charles Nash, Miss Marie Suter, Miss Isabel Storey, Mrs. Walter Nash and Miss Anna Widmyer.

Receiving with Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, sponsor of the Assembly, will be Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation; Mrs. Charles H. Bradley, Mrs. Clarence Burton, Mrs. T. Perry Lippitt, Mrs. Stephen C. Rowan, Mrs. Edward Warren Sturdevant, Mrs. Charles Tilghman, Mrs. Lutz Wahl and Mrs. William Mark Conrad.

A feature of the ball, which is given for younger married people, debutantes, sub-debutantes and post-debutantes, will be a floor show called "Debs-Daze Knights," to be presented before supper under the direction of Miss Marion Venable.

Returns From New York.

H. M. Cochrane to Sail Tomorrow for France

H. Merle Cochrane, First Secretary of the American Embassy at Paris, left yesterday for New York and will sail tomorrow for Paris. He has been staying at the Hay-Adams House here.

Secretary Roper to Go To Luncheon in Chicago

The Secretary of Commerce, Daniel C. Roper, will go to Chicago today to attend a luncheon tomorrow in his honor, given by the Business Advisory Council. Accompanying the Secretary will be his assistant, Col. J. Monroe Johnson.

Mrs. Sibley Is Y. W. C. A. Guest Here

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Head's Wife Speaks on European Affairs.

Calls Democracy Dependent on Philosophic and Religious Bases.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

If our democracy fails, it will not be because someone comes in from outside to tear it down, but because we are careless of the religious and philosophic base on which it was founded, declared Mrs. Harper Sibley yesterday at the luncheon given in her honor by the women's board of the Y. W. C. A.

Nearly 150 members and friends were present to hear her tell of her experiences abroad last summer, where she attended conferences of the Oxford Group in England and the meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce in Germany as one of two women delegates.

Mrs. Sibley's analysis of the world situation justified her assertion that she had studied it seriously before attending the chamber of commerce sessions. She had the feeling, she said, that a woman joining in the deliberations of such a group of men must know as much if not more about the subject of their discussions than they.

The Ayran myth is being made the base of religious and philosophic movement in Germany, as is the Marxian theory in Russia, she said. These are being built up in the minds of people as something to uphold and defend. Only the church is standing up to the government in either country, she said. The German concentration camps are being enlarged to take care of those who have recently been arrested for taking their religious stand contrary to the dictates of the state.

The totalitarian systems maintained under both the Hitler regime and that of the Russian Soviet disregard individual rights, she pointed out, and disturb us today because they are diametrically opposed to Christianity, which places primary value on the individual.

"Only if you value the individual, do you dare try democracy," she asserted.

Mrs. Sibley, who attended the International Chamber of Commerce sessions as a delegate in place of her husband, former president of the United States chamber, who was unable to go, described the reception prepared for the visitors in Germany.

From discussion of disturbing elements apparent in the economic discussions of the chamber of commerce sessions, she went to the deliberations of the Oxford group.

Both communism and capitalism were indicted there, she said, and it was concluded that the Christian Church, although it must always be concerned with conditions under which men live and work, must never take sides in any political or social system, but must raise its altars above them so that all men may worship there.

Communism was indicted for its Utopianism; the belief that the individual can be molded into the pattern of the state,

Capitalism was indicted for its acquisitiveness, the wide discrepancies between men; irresponsible possession of power which comes with great wealth, and the trade cycle and unemployment, she said.

The luncheon yesterday was arranged in just a day when it was learned it would be possible for Mrs. Sibley to come from her home in Rochester to attend. Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president of the Y. W. C. A., presided, and Mrs. William Hamilton Bayly, honorary president, was among the guests at the head table. Another seated there was Miss Florence Brown, also of Rochester, who is visiting Washington for a few days. Miss Brown was the second general secretary of the "Y. W.," having served from 1907 until about 1921. The other secretaries were Miss Grace Caswell, the first, who is now married and living in Pittsburgh; Mrs. William A. Slade, the former Miss Gertrude McArthur, and the present secretary, Miss Hettie P. Anderson, who was a guest at the head table yesterday.

Others seated there were Mrs. Albert Atwood, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. J. J. O'Connor, Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Miss Margaret Fox, Miss Emma Hay Heck, Mrs. A. Chambers Oliphant, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong and Mrs. Fred E. Wright.

Two Large Luncheons Given by Important Women's Groups

"Government is merely housekeeping on a big scale," Senator Dixie Bibbs Graves told the Woman's National Democratic Club at its weekly forum luncheon yesterday. She pointed out that with women more and more moving to the fore in public office holding there should be resultant improvement in the Nation's "housekeeping."

Senator Graves began her address by declaring she was possibly "a little partial" to her own sex even to the extent of seeing only the woman in the moon and never the man.

Declaring the Democratic Party at height of the depression stepped forward and reminded the Nation that the Government was founded for the people, Mrs. Graves praised the program of the New Deal as the thing that has "preserved our form of Government for America" while all sorts of isms are springing up over the world. "That is the message of Democracy," she added; "that the Government is there to give help when help is needed and to leave one to the greatest freedom when that help is no longer needed."

Senator Graves had a capacity crowd at the luncheon. At the head table with her were the president of the club, Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Miss Irene Tedrow, who is appearing at the National Theater this week, Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Benjamin Yancy Martin, Mrs. George W. Musgrave, Mr. Hubbard, Wilbur Ross Hubbard and Mrs. Ernest Daniel, who introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Mark Bristol had a group of guests with her including Mrs. Hugo L. Black, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Clifford Durr, Mrs. L. Johnson and Miss Virginia Price. Others giving parties included Mrs. Edward Keating who had among her guests Mrs. W. W. Howes, Mrs. Huston Thompson and Mrs. A. H. Blanding; Mrs. Harry Fulton whose guests were Mrs. Harlee Branch, Mrs. J. Blinton Tribby, Mrs. Robert McNeill, Mrs. Stephen Harding, Mrs. L. D. Hawkins and Miss Sara Phelan.

The director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, Mrs. McAllister, and her assistant director, Mrs. Evans, were among members who dropped in after the lunch to hear Senator Graves.

D. C. Film Group Hears Jack Wilk

Women who are interested in better motion pictures can do no greater service to the industry or to their own desire for films of a high standard than to encourage the support of good pictures, Jack Wilk, of Warner Brothers, told members of the Washington Better Films Council yesterday. The council, of which Mrs. Frank A. Linzel is president, met at the Ambassador Theater yesterday morning, with about 200 present.

The program opened with a preview of "The Man Without a Country," one in a series of historical films being made by Warner Brothers, and Mr. Wilk's discussion followed. He explained all the angles from which material for the making of a picture was considered—its appeal to persons of different sections of the country; to those in cities and those in rural districts; its timeliness, so it would not be outdated by events which might transpire during its filming; the right star for the picture, and successful books and plays.

Five Chairmen Chosen For Guild Bridge Party

Announcement of five chairmen of committees for the annual bridge party to be held in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel on Monday, December 6, by the women of St. Gertrude's Guild has been made by Mrs. James Edward Duke, chairman of the event.

Mrs. Duke reported that plans are under way for the largest bridge party ever sponsored by the guild. Mrs. Augustus E. Giegengack will have charge of tickets, which are now on sale. Mrs. Raymond Francis Garrity will be chairman of the patronesses. Mrs. James Bernard Flynn will take over the apron table, which is one of the most popular of all the exhibits.

THE ARKANSAS STATE SOCIETY Thursday night is entertaining at a dance in the Willard with Senator Hattie Caraway and the newly elected Senator John Miller, of Arkansas, as guests of honor. Also in the receiving line will be other members of the congressional delegation and their wives. Lester Gibson is president of the society and will be assisted by other officers at the reception and dance.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS will be filled as a result of the luncheon given yesterday by the Women's Auxiliary of the Medical Society of the District. Proceeds of the party, which was given at the Washington Golf and Country Club, will be used for welfare work of the auxiliary. Mrs. M. A. Selinger was chairman, assisted by Mrs. LeRoy Hyde, Mrs. E. N. Greear, Mrs. J. F. Crawley, Mrs. W. G. Gill, Mrs. Edward Morrison and Mrs. James Moser.

The tables were decorated with chrysanthemums in fall colors and there were attractive little ash trays as bridge prizes. Both the ballroom and dining room were used to accommodate the 200 guests.

Oh, yes, and there was a table of articles made by students at the Henry and Annie Hurt Home for the Blind, proceeds from the sale of which went, of course, to the home.

Right on the heels of the successful party comes the auxiliary's regular meeting tomorrow at 11 o'clock in the Medical Society Building. After the meeting and luncheon, members will attend the dedication of the Dr. Dick Memorial in Alexandria.

CATHERINE CATE COBLENTZ, poet and author of children's books, is to be the guest speaker for the "Books and Their Makers" group of the Y. W. C. A. next Tuesday night—giving her fifth annual program for the members. Alice Hutchins Drake, of course, is the leader of the group, as she has been for many years. Mrs. Coblentz (Mrs. William W. Coblentz in private life) wrote her latest book, "Blue and Silver Necklace," while she was in Flagstaff, Ariz., with her husband, who is a scientist. Her first three appearances before the "Books and Their Makers" group was as a poet, reading from her published works. Last year she talked on her first book for young people, "Animal Pioneers," and this time she will discuss "The By-Products of Writing."

MRS. ALBERT LOSCHE, Democratic national committeewoman from Indiana, was a guest of Mrs. Louis Ludlow at the luncheon of the Women's National Democratic Club yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller was also there, full of jokes which kept her table in gales of laughter most of the time during the luncheon. Mrs. Mark Bristol's table looked like lots of fun, too, with Mrs. Black among the guests, pretty as a picture and, apparently, not the least disturbed by her recent difficulties.

The day seemed one of fine feathers, too. Mrs. Ernest Daniel, who introduced Senator Dixie Bibb Graves, the guest speaker, had the longest without a contest, but there were others which were not to be ignored, among them the two shiny black ones on Mrs. Miller's hat.

THE VERMONT ASSOCIATION of the District is starting its season tomorrow with a meeting at the Washington Club at 6:30. Capt. Harry A. Baldridge, U. S. N., will speak on the life of Admiral George Dewey, the celebration of whose 100th anniversary is being arranged by a Vermont commission created by the State Legislature.

Members of the Vermont delegation in Congress will be guests of honor at a reception following the program, and dancing and the singing of songs of the Spanish-American War period are to follow that. Mrs. Charles A. Webb is moderator of the association and Phillip Hooker, town clerk.

Holy Cross Alumnae Give Dance Tomorrow

Tomorrow has been selected as the date for the scholarship dance and card party sponsored by the Alumnae Association of Holy Cross Academy. It will be at the Wardman Park Hotel.

All arrangements have been completed by the committee headed by Miss Miriam Hartnett, Miss Mary Virginia Burke, in charge of patrons; Miss Agnes Lougherty, arrangements, and Miss Margaret Batchelder, prizes. Miss Regina Hartnett, president, will head the receiving line.

Capitol Hill History Club Marks 40th Anniversary With Luncheon

Mrs. Moyer, Mrs. Stine and Mrs. Waterman, Members for More Than 30 Years, and Miss Stine, President, Light Birthday Candles.

The Capitol Hill History Club yesterday celebrated its fortieth anniversary with a birthday luncheon at 2400 Sixteenth street. Three members who have belonged to the society for more than 30 years—one the mother of the president—were present to light the candles on the cake. Mrs. John Moyer, who has been a member of the club for 32 years, lighted the first candle as the oldest in point of membership; Mrs. Clara M. Stine, mother of Miss Phebe Stine, the president, and Mrs. Jason Waterman, both members for 31 years, lighted the second and third candles and Miss Stine, the fourth, each representing ten years in the club's history.

Guests of honor included Miss Vella Winner, editor of the General Federation of Women's Clubs Magazine; Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District federation, both of whom spoke briefly, and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, a former member, who is now president of the Political Study Club and chairman of radio for the General Federation.

Among the guests also were other former members besides Mrs. Meritt; Mrs. John W. Weldon, Mrs. John B. Reed, Mrs. Cecil Beatty, Mrs. Donald M. Hildreth, Mrs. J. Harry Phillips, Mrs. David L. Pitcher and Mrs. Arthur J. McMillan.

The program included a history of the club, read by Mrs. Waterman, in which she reviewed its meetings from the time it was formed 40 years ago by a group of women who lived in the vicinity of the Capitol and, perhaps for that very reason, ruled that neither politics nor religion should ever be discussed in the club. With controversial subjects eliminated, and the membership limited to 30, it has followed a peaceful path during all the years and escaped the viscissitudes which have befallen other organizations.

Mrs. Harry Patterson yesterday presented an amusing monologue in which she took the role of a colored mammy and used names of all the club members in telephone conversations. There were also piano selections by Mrs. Percy A. Taylor and Mrs. Edward M. Wallace, and songs by Miss Stine. She is well known as a soloist, is a member of the Friday Morning Music Club, the Lovette Choral Club, and sings at the Mount Vernon Methodist Church, so members of her club avail themselves of every opportunity to have her contribute to their programs.

The members present yesterday included Mrs. Robert E. Adams, Mrs. Raymond N. Babcock, Mrs. Stanley H. Beasley, Mrs. William Clements, Mrs. William M. Collins, Mrs. Ernest H. Elliott, Mrs. Charles E. Ferguson, Mrs. Elbie K. Foltz, Miss Mabel B. Hayes, Mrs. J. Clyde Hemphill, Mrs. Douglas W. Holton, Mrs. Homer N. Link, Mrs. Arthur Loveren, Mrs. Philip Martin, Mrs. John W. Mee, Mrs. Walter R. Metz, Mrs. Charles H. Miller, Mrs. Moyer, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. Raymond B. Root, Mrs. Daniel Shook, Mrs. Wilmer Souder, Mrs. Stine and Mrs. Waterman.

Other guests were Miss Iva Swift, Mrs. Arthur E. Bonnet, Mrs. I. Dodson, Mrs. Clyde Smith, wife of Representative Smith; Mrs. Ann Hodgson, Mrs. Daniel Smith, Miss Virginia Gillette, and Mrs. Kingdom.

D. A. R. Women Seeking Offices

New fall hats are sailing into the ring for much coveted State offices of the Daughters of the American Revolution of the District.

Frances Scott Chapter is presenting Mrs. E. P. Andrus as its candidate. Mrs. Andrus is well known throughout the organization for her humanitarian activities, which have included work in Braille for the blind and interest in the mountain school projects of her chapter. She has been regent of Frances Scott Chapter and is now serving as vice chairman of the State committee on National Defense Patriotic Education.

Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Bell has been indorsed by the Capt. Wendell Wolfe Chapter as its candidate for "State chaplain or any other State office necessary to be filled."

Mrs. Bell has served as historian, vice regent and regent of the chapter. In the State work she has held appointments as State chairman of the Manual for Citizenship, and State chairman of Approved Schools. In the national society, Mrs. Bell has served as a member of the committee on seating and invitations for the Continental Congress. At present she is State chairman of the Americanism committee which co-operates with the Americanization School. She is also a trustee of the State Officers' Club.

Fear for Trade Prompts U. S. Tokyo Warning

By the Associated Press.

Anxiety lest China's open door be slammed shut prompted the State Department to insist that Japan talk things over with the United States before altering the maritime customs service to China.

The move, announced by Secretary Hull yesterday, reflected official apprehension here that the reported intention of Japan to seize control of the customs might have the effect of restricting the commerce of non-Japanese nations.

Similar action has been taken by Great Britain. The two nations, acting independently but keeping each other closely informed of their movements, presented their virtual demands Sunday in formal notes to the Japanese foreign office.

The American representations, stressing in vigorous written phrases the same views previously set forth in an oral communication by the American Ambassador to Tokyo, expressed strong opposition to any action calculated to disturb the integrity of the customs setup.

Secretary Hull withheld the complete text of the American note but said that in submitting it, Ambassador Joseph C. Grew directed the attention of Foreign Minister Koki Hirota to the economic and historic nature of the American Government's interest in the customs organization.

A large portion of revenues collected by the Chinese customs is pledged to the servicing of China's foreign obligations. However, the share of American investors in such obligations is relatively small.

Indications here were that the American Government is concerned more with what may happen to this country's trade with China if Japan assumes complete customs control than with any present financial investments.

It is recalled here that when Japan seized administration of the Manchurian customs after setting up the state of Manchukuo it dealt a severe blow to United States exports to that territory.

Louis Bessemer, U.S. Clerk, Named Greenbelt Mayor

Louis Bessemer, clerk in the Public Health Service, was elected mayor of Greenbelt, Md., by the new five-member council last night by a vote of 3 to 2. H. H. Maurer, mechanic for the American Airlines, was elected mayor pro tem.

Roy S. Braden, community manager appointed by the Farm Security Administration, was appointed town manager and was sworn in by Mayor Bessemer immediately after his appointment.

The council appointed a committee to survey the need for bus service to Greenbelt and to report at next Tuesday's meeting. Bus service now is provided to East Riverdale by Greenbelt Consumers Services, Inc., connecting with local lines there.

37 Die, 50 Injured In Rebel Air Raid

Madrid, Nov. 29 (AP).—Thirty-seven persons were killed and 50 wounded today at Guadalajara, 30 miles northeast of here, in an insurgent air raid that brought the total casualties from week-end air attacks around Madrid to 181 dead and 410 injured.

(Reports to Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish frontier, said the intensive bombings near Madrid appeared to indicate a major insurgent drive against that city.)

Gen. Ludendorff, at 72, Reported Seriously Ill

Japanese Speed Drive as Italy Lends Backing

Duce Recognizes Regime in Manchukuo; War Declaration Seen.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Nov. 30.—The Japanese army announced today that the famous Chinese forts at Kiangyin, 80 miles northwest of Shanghai and last important barrier between the Japanese and Nanking, had fallen and that the Japanese troops had begun their march on the capital.

Nanking is only 85 miles beyond Kiangyin up the Yangtze River. Its only defenses were hastily constructed earthworks thrown up about the capital after Chinese resistance collapsed on the Shanghai front.

Thirty-two Americans refused to leave Nanking despite the impending Japanese attack.

Secretaries of the United States Embassy vainly urged the group, including missionaries, newspapermen and newsreel cameramen, to board the gunboat Panay of the Yangtze River patrol which was lying off the city ready to sail for Hankow.

Earlier 42 other United States citizens, including 7 women, had gone aboard a steamer hulk in the river ready to board the Panay.

Meantime Chinese feverishly were strengthening their trenches around Nanking and insisted that they would defend the city to the last.

There was an increasing belief that the Japanese soon might announce a formal declaration of war to regularize the naval blockade of China's coast and convince Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek further resistance will result only in increasingly difficult peace terms.

Developments during the past 24 hours included:

In Rome Italy formally announced it has granted recognition to Manchukuo. The move was seen as tightening Italian-Japanese collaboration and assuring Tokyo of strong support from Rome in event of war with Russia.

The Japanese government was said to have assured the British, French and United States Ambassadors, who called on Foreign Minister Koki Hirota in Tokyo separately, that all foreign rights in China, specifically foreign interests in the Chinese customs collections, will be respected meticulously.

Ford V-Eights Offered in Two Types for 1938

De Luxe Line Added to Standard Model, Both in Low Price Area.

Ford V-type 8-cylinder cars for 1938, which are offered in the 1938 models in two distinct lines differing in appearance and price but both in the lowest price field, go on display today in Washington Ford dealers' salesrooms.

One is a newly styled standard Ford line, in coupe, tudor and fordor body types, powered either with the 85 or the 60 horsepower V-8 engine. The standard cars are designed to meet requirements of the many motor car owners whose means dictate maximum economy in first cost, as well as in maintenance and operating expense.

The other is a newly designed de luxe line for owners who desire additional style and appointments. Powered only with the 85 horsepower motor, the line includes eight body types, the coupe, tudor and fordor sedans, as well as the club coupe, convertible cabriolet, convertible sedan and phaeton.

The two lines of cars have the same improved chassis but their styling is distinctly different.

The de luxe cars are larger in appearance. The hood has been lengthened. Its nearly vertical front is carried in a "V" well down into the radiator grille. Horizontal lines of the grille bars and the louvres are made in a bright rustless steel band which is carried along the belt line to the rear.

The new standard line cars also present a larger appearance, with a newly designed front end, grille, hood and fenders. The front end is formed in a "V," with the horizontal grille bars extending unbroken along the hood sides to form the louvres.

Sixty Years of the Theater Reviewed by Nelson Bell, In Anniversary Edition

In 1877 Joseph Jefferson was the favorite, and the National Theatre and Ford's Opera House were the gathering places of theatre goers. Today there is a movie in every neighborhood besides the big downtown houses, but now, as then, The Washington Post finds the world of entertainment one well worth reporting for its readers. For sixty years The Post has covered the theater, and in the Sixtieth Anniversary Edition Nelson Bell will review the history of stage and screen in Washington as reflected in The Post.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

If command by radio had been as easy in the last war as it will be in the next one, this imaginary conversation might have occurred between Berlin and a Zeppelin commander en route to bomb American GHQ, at Chaumont:

* * * *

* * * *

This would be assuming a lot of things, including an end of the distaste which rival GHQ have for bombing each other . . . But for the next war the situation is not so fantastic as it sounds.

"—imaginary conversation, 1938"

Especially will this headquarters control be true of the Navy . . . Radio communication between Washington and distant warships is now so perfect that commands to clear for action, load, aim and fire might as well be given from the Navy offices at Eighteenth street and Constitution avenue in Washington as from a flagship, say, off the coast of Formosa.

* * * *

Things have changed since Admiral Dewey, with the Hong Kong cable cut, steamed off toward Manila, completely severed from all touch with Washington, and proceeded to bombard the mischief out of the Spanish . . .

Washington couldn't have stopped him if it wanted to, any more than it could have stopped Jackson at New Orleans in 1815.

* * * *

A gentleman who knows a great deal about naval communications nowadays tells me that the British cabinet, sitting in a radio control room in London, could tell Mussolini and anyone else who cared to listen in:

* * * *

"We have 50 planes over the Palazzo Venezia and 10 planes and 2 battleships covering each Italian warship. Now will you get the hell out of Spain, including Mallorca?"

* * * *

And Il Duce could reply:

"Just a minute, Neville" . . . (Aside to Berlin.) "How about it, Adolf? Okay with you?"

Adolf: "Okay, if we can have Austria and half of Czechoslovakia."

Stalin (poping in from Moscow): "The hell you say!"

Chamberlain (from London): "Very well, Jellicoe (or whoever is on the flagship). Tell the Hood to let 'em have it."

Chautemps (from Paris): Vive la France!

"—imaginary conversation, 1918"

"And the whole world listening in on its short-wave sets (provided all this nonsense about secret codes, which everyone can decipher as rapidly as the addressee, has been dropped) could hear the British seadog's report:

"Okay, chief . . . Two down . . . Shall we give 'em the other barrel?"

* * * *

(That's how close Washington is to the fleet nowadays . . . It would simply be a slight extension of modern open diplomacy at the point of a gun.)

* * * *

And the conversation from London might continue:

"Air Squadron Commander XYZ: Drop a dozen bombs on the Victor Emanuel monument where Benito can see 'em land from his balcony . . . I've always thought that monument too gingerbready anyhow.

Il Duce: "Hey, just a minute . . .

Chamberlain: "Say uncle?"

Il Duce: "Uncle!"

* * * *

Or it might be the other way 'round . . . I'm just trying to show how closely we are approaching the Wilsonian ideal of "Open diplomacy, openly arrived at."

If all this sounds a trifle fantastic, think how natural it will seem in the next war to hear a familiar voice come out of your bedside radio:

"This is Ted Husing, aboard the flagship in the Pacific . . . Boy, oh boy, is the American fleet hot today! The enemy marksmanship is putrid . . . Now there is a lull in the firing, so I'm going to turn you over to the glass booth at the Navy Department in Washington . . . Take it away, Graham!"

* * * *

And then an excited voice from Washington:

"It's a perfect day here for the decisive battle of the year. . . From my booth I can just see the glorious cherry blossoms around the tidal basin . . . Admiral Leahy has rolled up his sleeves . . . Secretary Swanson is drinking a glass of milk; he is cool as a cucumber . . . What a war! What a war!"

That will be the coziest way to see the next war.

New Moves Indicate Aid To Gallinger

Congress Is Assailed by Copeland for Being 'Penurious.'

By Gerald G. Gross

Material improvement of Gallinger Hospital's service to the needy sick loomed as an early probability yesterday, less than one week after The Post first called attention to the acute problem.

First, the District Commissioners are believed to have impressed the Budget Bureau with Gallinger's need for more nurses and more space and, in the latter connection, indorsed Health Officer George C. Ruhland's request to have the old Upshur Street Tuberculosis Hospital converted into a convalescent home to relieve overcrowding at Gallinger.

Although the "gag rule" precludes official discussion of what transpired at the budget hearing, Commissioner George E. Allen emerged from the lengthy session with the remark, "Everything looks favorable."

Copeland Assails Fund Lack.

Second, an indication that the municipal hospital's cause will be fought more aggressively than ever in the Senate came with the following statement by Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York:

"There isn't anything wrong with Gallinger Hospital that money won't cure. The penuriousness of Congress is to blame for present conditions there, not lack of knowledge."

A member of the Senate District Committee and of the appropriations sub-committee on the District, Copeland yesterday obtained from Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, Gallinger superintendent, up-to-the-minute figures on number of patients, personnel and finances.

"The main building," said the New Yorker, "was built to take care of about 300 patients. The medical and nursing staffs are the right sizes to handle that many. But the census today was around 450. Dr. Bocock is an able man and he has a fine staff but you can't take care of 450 with a personnel that is 50 per cent short."

To Continue Fight.

Senator Copeland asserted that he will continue to fight for adequate appropriations and to hope that increases approved by the Senate won't die in conference.

His militant criticism of Congressional "penuriousness" was politely deprecated by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee on District appropriations, who said that his unit "gave them everything they asked for."

Gallinger's needs will be examined carefully when the supply bill reaches his committee, Thomas declared, adding that it is probable his group will make a personal inspection of the hospital before reporting the measure to the Senate.

Although Copeland apparently thinks Congress is responsible for the city hospital's undesirable condition, a diametrically opposite view was expressed in Dr. Ruhland's letter to Chairman Ross A. Collins of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, which was made public yesterday.

Ruhland Blames Bad Planning.

"It was mainly through your efforts," wrote Dr. Ruhland, "that the Health Department budget for the current fiscal year received the additional funds which it has for much needed improvements in the service. If these sums are still inadequate to meet our needs it should be recognized that the health services in the District of Columbia unfortunately face the accumulated effect of years of insufficient planning.

"To hold Congress solely responsible for this situation would certainly be unfair. In discussing the health needs of the District I have consistently maintained that if matters are not as we would like them to be it is essentially because those of us who are officially responsible for service have somehow failed to convince the appropriations bodies of the necessity that exists."

Although Dr. Ruhland yesterday reiterated his hope that the $150,000 item, recommended by him but cut out by the Commissioners, to begin construction of a new medical building at Gallinger Hospital, will be restored, it was the general feeling among District officials that this project will be deferred in favor of the Upshur street convalescent home plan.

Rep. Ramspeck Opposes Slash In Clerk Hours

Merit Leader Will Fight Any Reduction in Weekly Total.

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee said yesterday he is opposed to any 5-day week bill for Government employes that provides for a reduction in hours below the 39-hour standard.

"I believe we should first try to reduce the hours of some employes who work much longer than 39 hours a week," he said.

District firemen, hospital guards and veterans' administration attendants were cited by Ramspeck as workers who now spend much more than 39 hours a week on their jobs.

Ramspeck said he probably would favor a five-day week bill that did not reduce present weekly hours or even if it increased them to 40 so employes would work an eight-hour day instead of seven as at present.

"That wouldn't cost the Government much money," he said, "as only a comparatively small increase in personnel would be necessary.

"A 35-hour week, as proposed in the pending bills, would mean a reduction in working time of four hours a week for 110,000 employes in the District and that would necessitate hiring of thousands more employes at an annual cost of millions of dollars."

Ramspeck said it is unlikely action will be taken at the special session on the McCormack five-day week bill and that it's fate in the regular session will depend on the Administration's attitude.

So far the Administration has given no hint of approval and members believe that it will be opposed to any five-day week that substantially raises cost of Government operation.

Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, has introduced a companion bill to McCormack's in the Senate, but the Senate Civil Service Committee has made no move to consider it.

A spirited battle, meanwhile, loomed for this afternoon over the McKellar postmaster patronage bill as the Senate Postoffice and Post roads Committee scheduled a second meeting for 2 o'clock.

Although Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, asked that all bills affecting postmaster appointments be transferred to the committee from the Civil Service Committee so a compromise could be worked out, the transfer has not been effected or requested by Chairman Bulow of the Civil Service Committee.

School Clerks Ask Motherhood Rights Granted Teachers

Clerks and stenographers in the District school system may have children if they want to, but they take the chance of having their salaries reduced. The income of public school teachers, however, is not affected by maternity.

Members of the Clerical Association, believing they are being discriminated against, have submitted to Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou a request that they be put on equal footing with teachers as far as motherhood is concerned.

The clerks point out that the Board of Education's rule for women employes who are to become mothers applies to both teachers and clerical workers but that in practice the teachers get the better of the situation. When they return after maternity leave they are reinstated in the position they left.

But a clerk, they claim, is considered a new appointee after a maternity leave and "must start at the minimum of the salary class of whatever position is vacant, regardless of the salary she was receiving before termination.

9 District Pupils Given High School Journalism Honor

Nine students in Washington high schools have won recognition in contests conducted by Quill and Scroll, national organization of school newspapers, it was learned here yesterday.

The nine were given honorable mention or named among winners in the Southeastern section of the country for editorial excellence and knowledge of vocabulary and current events.

Among winners in the editorial contest was Gertrude Gorin, of Roosevelt High School. Honorable mention in the same contest was given Stewart McGee, of Central High School; Richard McGee, of McKinley, and Anna May Schaben, of Immaculate Conception.

Walker Barkdull, of Roosevelt High School, was named a winner in the current events contest. Honorable mention was given Carl Ross, of Central, and Howard Phillips, of McKinley.

School System Lauded By Brookland Citizens

Declaring that they wanted to keep the Board of Education out of politics, members of the Brookland Citizens Association last night went on record as favoring the appointment of board members by the District Supreme Court, as is practiced at present, instead of by the District Commissioners or by popular vote, methods which have been proposed.

Germ Yield of D. C. Cafe Glasses Drops 99½% in Three Weeks

Inspectors Find Only 3,000 to the Glass Now and Intend to Bring Restaurants Down to an Average of 500.

Six hundred thousand germs on the rim of every glass the first week.

Fve thousand four hundred the second week.

Three thousand last week.

That's what examiners from the Bureau of Food Inspection have found in the last three weeks of bacteriological surveys in sample Washington restaurants, Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of the bureau, told the Washington Restaurant Association last night.

Cafe Safer Than Home.

Dr. Ashworth attributed the rapid decline in germ averages to publicity and to the fear of restaurateurs that their licenses will be withheld until they approximate the bureau's minimum standard of 500 germs to the glass.

"We're going to have the best set of restaurants in the United States," the speaker declared. "Our recent employment of bacteriologists as food inspectors is the biggest step forward in improving restaurants we've ever made." Dr. Ashworth said he believed Washington is the only city in America to conduct a laboratory investigation of the cleanliness of public eating utensils.

Washington's new program points the way, he indicated, toward a Nation-wide campaign against the current increase of saliva-borne diseases.

Full co-operation of the Washington Restaurdnt Association was promised Dr. Ashworth by Theodore D. Sloat, chairman of last night's meeting in the S. & W. Cafeteria.

Speaking in place of Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Dr. Melvin P. Isaminger, director of the Bureau of Public Health Education, asserted that even now it is "many times safer to eat in restaurants than in the home."

E. D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, stated that the Minimum Wage Board today would make its selection of employer, employe and public representatives who will appear at the forthcoming hearings on minimum wages for hotel and restaurant workers.

Plans for the Regional Restaurant convention at the Hotel Mayflower on December 6, 7 and 8 were discussed at length by several speakers, including Julius Lulley, general convention chairman; Hubert H. Keller, general chairman of program committee, and Robert J. Wilson, general manager.

Police Find a Car Which Is Too Slow For the Brake Test

Washington police last night found an automobile that wouldn't go fast enough to qualify for a brake test. With the driver's foot stomping hard on the accelerator and with Officer Spotswood Gravely of the Fourth Precinct watching the speedometer, the machine registered only 7 miles per hour.

The brake test came about when the car, driven by Robert S. Ingram, colored, 47, of 404 First street northwest, collided at Fourth street and Virginia avenue southwest with a taaxi operated by William C. Calloway, of 5212 Eastern avenue northeast. The fenders of the taxi were crumpled.

Chest Drive Faces Deficit Of $200,000

Workers to Meet Today at Willard for Final Report Luncheon.

New Pledges, Increases Expected to Bring $1,850,000 Total.

Faced with a probable deficit of at least $200,000 in funds for the coming year, Community Chest workers will meet at noon today in the Willard for their final report luncheon.

With volunteers in all units still striving to reach the goal of $2,059,000, Chest officials said last night no exact estimate of the shortage could be made.

New pledges and increases in gifts already made, however, are expected to carry the total to about $1,850,000.

Members of the tenth anniversary campaign committee, the 32 civic leaders who were formerly high officials in the Chest but stepped "back into the ranks" this year, held a long executive session yesterday to consider Chest policies in the light of the limited funds which will be available for 1938.

Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president of the Hecht Co. and vice chairman of the Chest publicity unit, last night made a final campaign appeal over radio station WRC.

Referring to the exciting spectacle of the Redskin-Packer football game on Sunday, Dulcan asked, "What about the people who never see a football game, who can't afford the price?"

"Let's be good sports. Let's do our share. The Community Chest fund has reached the 10-yard line. Let's make the goal. Let's kick the extra point."

Increased gifts reported yesterday include $600 from Theodore Noyes; $250, Dr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, $230.75, employes of The Star; $200 from Wilbur F. Nash, Mrs. Charles L. McCawley and an anonymous donor, and $100 from Mrs. Henry Leonard and Mrs. Frances T. Shiras.

At intervals that are all to rare there occur occasions in the theater when superb acting, flawless direction and a kaleidoscopic richness of investiture conspire to reveal the drama in its most exalted mood. Such an occasion was celebrated in the National Theater last evening when Maurice Evans and his associate players were seen for the first time in Washington in Will Shakespeare's tragic drama of "King Richard II."

The large and distinguished audience signalized the most brilliant theatrical event of the year by according the star and his cast an ovation at the fall of the final curtain on the 3 acts and 17 scenes, during which, for the first time within memory, cheers and "bravos" were mingled with the applause and the house came to its feet as the company on stage burst into "God Save the King" in compliment to Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, and Lady Lindsay, present in the third row center. This was a fitting climax to a magnificent performance of a long and arduous play.

"King Richard II" is perhaps the least known to the theater of the Bard's major works, by reason of its infrequent presentation. Written with great lyric beauty, it nevertheless is declamatory and abstruse in many of its more prolonged periods and a work that imposes a tremendous burden upon those in the characters of prime importance. Lacking the sublime love story of "Romeo and Juliet," the murderous melodrama of "Macbeth" and the profoundly intellectual depth of "Hamlet," it still partakes in varying degrees of the most absorbing qualities of all of these. The breadth of its psychological scope is as great as its tragic tale of a profligate king's vanity, arrogance, vacillation, weakness and final doom is direct in movement, if not in speech.

A Sovereign's Fatal Greed.

Put in motion by King Richard's banishment of his feuding cousins, Henry Bolingbroke, son of John the Gaunt, and Thomas Mowbray, son of the Duke of Norfolk, and the confiscation of their properties and estates to finance a futile war in Ireland, the drama proceeds then to trace the dissolution of a dynasty, the spiritual and moral degeneration of the last of the Plantagenet monarchs and the assumption of the throne of England by Bolingbroke, returned from exile at the head of a rebellious army as the Duke of Lancaster, to become King Henry IV.

This uninvolved cycle of retributive events is embellished with soliloquies, apostrophes and flights of poetic imagery that are both acted and staged with beauty, imagination and dramaatic power. It is illuminated by touches of inspired artistry and lent forcefulness by the extraordinary capability of Mr. Evans and his supporting artists. It is, furthermore, enhanced by niceties of direction and staging that compound an impressive symposium of the finest elements of a glorious art the theater is able to muster.

To the enactment of the title role, Maurice Evans brings the complete equipment of an artist who must be placed in the front rank of Shakespearean actors of his day. Possessing the unusual advantage of being the character's proper age, he distinguishes his portrait of a royal weakling by eloquent mobility of feature, a vibrant and finely modulated voice and a clarifying reading that brings new shades of meaning and hitherto unexplored depths of lilting beauty to passages that are a tax upon any player's intelligence and ingenuity. A reading of the text brings to the library student only a fraction of the pith this admirable artist discovers in his lines. It is an exhausting role, exhaustively and exquisitely portrayed.

Superlative Performances.

There are those in the surrounding ensemble who match the star's facility in large measure. Foremost among these are Frederick Worlock, as Bolingbroke; Donald Randolph, as Mowbray; Lee Baker, as John of Gaunt, and Charles Dalton, as the Duke of Northumberland. Mr. Worlock plays with a lusty vigor and commanding power in his assignment to the role of the vengeful lord who brought havoc to the house of his sovereign. Mr. Baker, as Gaunt, breathes a gentler note into the character of the broken-hearted father, but one that is no less effective an addition to the drama's variety and strength. Both shared the audience's enthusiasm with their star. Lionel Hogarth relieved the tenseness of many scenes by his splendid assumption of the amusingly incompetent figure of the aged Duke of York.

Predominantly a play peopled by plotting and warring males, there is still a place in the three acts for the gracious presence of a tender and adoring queen, impersonated with charm by Eleanor Phelps, and a briefly sorrowing Duchess of Gloucester, well played by Irene Tedrow.

The succession of scenes is facilitated by the utilization of the orchestra pit as an entrance and exit and the arena of brief periods of dialogue. So many participate in these innovations and the major action on the stage that only blanket credit may be given them for sterling contributions to a rounded performance that stamps "King Richard II" as one of the superlative achievements of recent years in the playhouse.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Two Washington Favorites Are Out of the Roster Of Players in 'Love of Women,' Next at National Clifford Brooke and Muriel Starr Will Not Appear in Play Booked for New York Premiere After Capital Week; a Photo Brings Back Memories; Novelties on Way; Civic to Hold Tryouts; Notes of Theater.

AN original suspicion is rapidly growing into the vague contours of a conviction that Washington will see quite a play when "Love of Women" opens in the National Theater next Monday night.

BELL.

Having been presented in both Boston and Toronto, the new Aimee and Philip Stuart English play will proceed from Washington direct to the Golden Theater, in New York, for its Broadway premiere on Monday night, December 13, according to a decision reached yesterday by Lee Shubert of the producing firm sponsoring the production. It is Mr. Shubert's view that the cast, now letter perfect in their parts, need continue the "tuning up" process no longer on "the road."

Since original announcement of the personnel of the company was made, there have been two substitutions that eliminate players the Capital always has held in high esteem. Clifford Brooke, long identified with the National Theater Players and almost a Washington fixture, and Muriel Starr, an actress always favorably received here, have been supplanted by Sayre Crawley and Molly Pearson. These newcomers to the cast also enjoy Washington's high regard.

Those with retentive memories will recall Miss Pearson as the star of the hit Scottish comedy of its year, "Bunty Pulls the Strings," which was the play burlesqued in their golden jubilee tour by Weber and Fields, at the Belasco Theater during the first Wilson administration, under the title of "Bunty Bulls and Strings." She was last seen locally, I believe, as Lady Lucas in "Pride and Prejudice," having succeeded Frances Brandt in the role on the play's second visit to the National the week of February 22 of this year.

* * * *

Speaking of Weber and Fields, there appears a reminiscent picture on this page that will bring back vivid recollections to the older group of theatergoers. Joe Weber and Lew Fields, the "Mike" and "Myer" of those famous old burlesques at their equally celebrated Music Hall just off Broadway on Twenty-ninth street in New York, are not as young as they used to be—and neither is the renowned Frankie Bailey, the "girl with the million dollar legs," but they quite evidently are up to the spirit of their old tricks. The Weber and Fields travesties, incidentally, followed a fixed formula. There always was the lively opening chorus, a song by Pete Dailey, comedy bits by Willie Collier, Dave Warfield, the stars themselves, Marie Dressler, Ada Lewis, a song by Lillian Russell and individual contributions by all of the other luminaries that made up the most famous company of its kind in the history of the American theater. The front line of girls was composed exclusively of the beauties of their day, with Frankie Bailey on one end and Bonnie McGinn on the other. One of the New York critics once wrote a much-quoted line to the effect that Frankie Bailey's entrance was greeted by two cheers—one for each leg! Miss Bailey, now 76, still retains much of the beauty of figure of four decades ago. Of late years, she has been presiding over a cigar counter in a famous Hollywood spot, if memory serves correctly, but now is coming "back to the races" with her old bosses in Ben Schulberg's new picture for Paramount. Heigho! It doesn't seem a day over a century ago!

This has been more or less of an "old home week-end" in the Capital's theaterdom, what with the many visiting firemen that have been dropping in and all.

Sunday and yesterday, Charles C. Moskowitz, one of the high executives of Loew's, Inc., was host to the talent at the Mayflower at some of his ne plus ultra prandial pastiming and pouring; Larry Beatus, former manager of the Palace and now a Loew division manager in New York, also was in town looking over his old stamping ground, and Thanksgiving guests at the home of his parents were Lou Brown, formerly in charge of Washington publicity for Loew's, Inc.; his wife, Shirley, and their daughter, Shirley Lou.

The so-called legitimate theater was represented by Leonard Bergman, executive administrator of the Erlanger estate, controlling the National, who week-ended with Manager Eddie Plohn at the Hay-Adams and left for New York on yesterday afternoon's 4 o'clock plane.

Charles Stern, southeastern division manager for United Artists, was another down for a sniff of Potomac air, and that's the way it has gone.

Nice town, Washington.

The second program of ancient films, to be presented by the Washington Film Society in the Rialto Theater tomorrow night at 8:30, will go "western" in a big way. The features of the bill will be "The Great Train Robbery," the first film to relate a connected dramatic story and the precursor of all "westerns;" "The Covered Wagon," looked upon by many as the best saga of the pioneer ever produced, and "The Last Card," starring William S. ("Two-Gun Bill") Hart. "The Great Train Robbery" was produced by the old Edison Co. in 1903; "The Last Card," by Thomas H. Ince, in 1914, and "The Covered Wagon," by Famous Players-Lasky (Paramount to you), in 1923. Twenty years of progress, according to my arithmetic.

* * * *

Two novelties are coming along to the Loew houses in the near future. When "Nothing Sacred" takes possession of the screen at the Palace, following the current engagement of "The Firefly," Washington will view a new development in Technicolor photography, devised by Jack Cosgrove, who denominates it a "color process printer." By use of newly invented equipment, "Nothing Sacred" will reveal all manner of trick photography and multiple exposures in natural color. This is something the engineers have been shooting at for years and now here it is.

Ballots now beaing received from boys and girls, mothers and teachers, by the Junior Cinema Guild, to determine what shall be included in the 15 programs to be presented in the Rialto Theater on Saturday mornings through the season, seem to indicate a neck-and-neck race among "The Devil Is a Cissy," "David Harum" and "Anne of Green Gables" for the second bill to be presented on December 11. The first program—to be screened on December 4, instead of November 27, as originally announced—will be featured by "Stormy," a western animal subject.

* * * *

The Washington Civic Theater is busy keeping up with its scheduled season of seven plays. Tryouts for animals and villagers needed for "Noah" having been held last night, additional tryouts will be held tonight and tomorrow night in the Pepco auditorium for John van Druten's "The Distaff Side," fourth play on the list. Director F. Cowles Strickland will be in charge and only members of the Civic group will be eligible.

Signs of the Times.

So along comes another of those things, culled by Albert J. Chandler from the marquee of the LaSalle Theater, out in Chicago:

"DOUBLE OR NOTHING."

"THE GAME THAT KILLS."

Actor Is Planning Long Trailer Trip

The most completely equipped tourists on the road to Mexico City next spring will be Mr. and Mrs. Warren William.

They are now making plans for the trip to be made in William's trailer car, which will enable them to carry a complete water and food supply until they reach their destination.

Between scenes of his new picture, "Arsene Lupin Returns," William is working on plans to build more storage space on the roof of his trailer.

Wouldn't Walk.

A dog, required to walk the plank with Franciska Gaal in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Buccaneer," refused. Coaxing and pleading failed to budge him. The trainer was giving up when an assistant director threw a ball in the water. That turned the trick and the dog went after it.

New Fake.

Those who have toyed with the thought of feigning amnesia to escape troubles, will see the possible result of such a ruse in "There Goes the Groom," new comedy with Burgess Meredith and Ann Sothern heading a large cast of favorites.

Stars of the Past Are Reunited

Memories of the Weber and Fields Music Hall of four decades ago will be revived for old-timers in the theater by this new coalition of 216 years of musical gaiety. In the usual direction, this frolicsome trio of youngsters are Joe (Mike) Weber, aged 70; Frankie Bailey, 76, and Lew (Myer) Fields, also 70, who made theatrical history on Broadway in those "Gay Nineties." They have been signed by Paramount to appear in B. P. Schulberg's "Blossoms on Broadway."

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 29.—In all Hollywood history, no star has ever been better equipped to win devoted friends than Grace Moore. And yet I know of no one who has made more personal enemies than that same gifted lady. She is an amazing personality—and an amazing person. Without being beautiful—she has tremendous charm—sex-appeal, if the Hays office doesn't mind the term. She turns it on—and off—as easily as you or I would manipulate the kitchen faucet, but lately she hasn't turned it on often enough.

MOORE

* * * *

Talk to the boys and girls who work on her pictures, and their verdict is unanimous—they do not like Grace Moore. Each one has some little anecdote to tell about her lack of consideration for "the other fellow." No one incident is very damning in itself, but all of them lumped together make quite an indictment. The electrician tells about a temperamental outburst, the publicity man talks about her lack of co-operation, the bit player complains about her using her stardom to rob him of his one good scene. And from the sum total of the reports, you get a mental picture of a person who is so completely engrossed in her own ambition and her own success that she has forgotten that other people have feelings.

* * * *

These are all "little voices," too weak to reach to the heights where great stars dwell. But Grace Moore ought to listen carefully, for there has never been a star so great that he or she could survive the dislike of the people who fill the little jobs in a studio.

* * * *

Maddest man in Hollywood today was Andy Devine. We were chatting on the set when a visiting exhibitor interrupted to tell about an experience he had "back home." About three months ago, an old man, obviously down and out—came to his office and asked for permission to see the show. "I'm broke," he said, "but my son, Andy Devine, is in the cast and I haven't seen him for years. The theater manager, touched and indignant that a famous son should so shamefully neglect his father, not only gave the man a ticket, but loaned him $5. "Of course," he told Andy hastily, as the Devine neck began to flame, "I realized as soon as I stopped to think, that it was probably an imposter." Andy nodded tersely, "It was," he said. "My father died in 1926."

Lunched with Myrna Loy, who was suffering from such an overdose of triumph that she could hardly eat. Seems that last weekend, her husband, Arthur Hornblow, chartered a yacht and invited a party of their friends to Cruise with them to Catalina. When Myrna confessed that she was not an expert sailor, everyone took pains to describe the horrors of seasickness, and the roughness of the Catalina Channel. Their stories grew more and more dramatic as the time for sailing approached, and they came to the boat loaded down with seasickness remedies, wrapped in gift packages and inscribed "To Myrna, with Love." The channel WAS rough, and the boat DID roll and . . . that's right—you have it—Myrna was the only one in the entire party who did not get seasick!

Ten years ago Tom Moore was one of the screen's brightest stars. Then came talkies—and Tom was lost somewhere in the shuffle. On several occasions, I asked producers what had become of him—and why. Invariably they answered that Tom, like many a silent screen favorite, wouldn't do for dialogue roles. An ironic statement, in view of the fact that Tom Moore, ruled out by the talkies, has a brand new contract with one of the major studios—as a dialogue director.

White Christmas Crawford Lure

Easterners who have lived in Hollywood for a number of years can appreciate the real reason why Joan Crawford is planning to spend December in New York.

"I am going to enjoy a 'White Christmas,'" said the star. "Of course it did snow in Hollywood for a few minutes in 1931, but that happens only once in every 30 years. I can't wait that long."

Miss Crawford, with her husband, Franchot Tone, will leave for a two months' vacation in the East after finishing her co-starring role with Spencer Tracy in "Mannequin."

They will spend two weeks at Lake Placid for the winter sports—"And the rest of the time seeing the new shows," said the star.

Brilliant Opening-Night Crowd Attends Opera at Metropolitan

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—The most brilliant opening night crowd of recent years swept into the rich, gilded old Metropolitan Opera House tonight for the start of its fifty-third season.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, in black velvet and diamonds; Mrs. Joseph Davies, wife of the United States Ambassador to Russia, in ermine and white fox, with a white flower tiara, and Elsa Schiaparelli, the Parisian designer, wearing a little gold pagoda on her head, were among the 4,000 who heard Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde."

The business recession seemed to be in a world apart from the opera house. Diamonds, emeralds and rich furs shone in the golden horseshoe. One pair of tickets sold for $150, and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and her party—usually content with one box on the opening night—occupied two.

The first standee in line was John Stephen, 26, a dramatic student, who arose at 5:30 a. m. and stood for 16 hours. While waiting, he read aloud from a discourse on Hamlet to help other standees pass the time.

More than 500 music lovers, eager to pay for standing room to hear Kirsten Flagstad and Lauritz Melchior, formed a line around the entire block, and 30 policemen were on duty.

A gallery of several hundred stood across the street and watched the entrance of the social leaders. They broke into cheers when Mrs. Roosevelt appeared.

Libby Holman arrived toward the end of the first act minus stockings, with scarlet toenails, and wearing a gold lace gown bestrewn with brilliants, a sable coat and a gold lace veil. She was escorted by top-hatted Lucius Beebe.

Mrs. August Belmont was simply dressed in black velvet.

Lucrezia Bori, "Mei" star who retired year before last and who saved the opera several years by working for the opera fund, tripped in quietly, unrecognized by the crowd in the lobby.

This was Flagstad's second successive performance on an opening night, and the second opening in succession for which a Wagner opera was used. Last year "Die Walkure" was chosen.

Singing with Flagstad and Melchoir were Kerstin Thorberg as Brangaene, the American Julius Huehn as Kurwenal, Emanuel List as King Marke, Arnold Gabor as Melot, Hans Clemens as the shepherd, Louis D'Angelo as the steersman and Karl Loufkoetter as the voice of the sailor.

The All-Pro Eleven Will Be Official

By Shirley Povich.

Along about mid-December, President Joe Carr, of the National Football League, will announce the findings of the league's 10 coaches and the fans of the Nation will have something there.

They will have, among other things, the names of the 11 all-fired best football players who set foot on a gridiron during the 1937 season. It will be the official All-League team and it will be no less authoritative than a Supreme Court decision.

POVICH.

As a true summation of individual football ability during the season, the All-Pro team shames the colleges' All-American. The All-American has steadily fallen into disrepute until it has reached the joke stage. The college player who, in recent years, hasn't been selected on somebody's All-America, has been no less than insulted. There are that many All-America teams.

Each to His Liking.

Joe Puss, of the Bronxville Bladder, considers no season complete until he has selected his very own All-America and most every other ink-stained wretch who has kept track of a set of first downs manages to publish his own All-America team. The magazines hire high-powered sports-writing names to give their own versions of the season's All-Americas and keep up the great pretense of considering it official.

There are 400 colleges, approximately, playing football in the United States, and the task of selecting the best eleven players among 'em isn't really a task; it's an impossibility. In the ancient days of football when Harvard, Yale and Princeton symbolized all that was best in the game, the selection of an All-America team was a pipe for the late Walter Camp. But a fellow would have to be a thousand-eyed centipede to get a comparative line on the Nation's talent nowadays.

But the All-Pro team, ah, that's something of an entirely different hue. Only ten teams to pick from and a direct comparison available to the selectors. And the league is intrusting those selections to the ten men best equipped to render 'em—the ten coaches of the league who have learned to value a tackle's knack of driving a play toward center like the United States Treasury men would appraise a gold shipment.

They Ought to Know.

Thus the all-pro team will be selected by the men most qualified to do the job. Nobody can get closer to a football player than his coach who knows why Joe Glutz picked up five yards on that smash through tackle and how Glutz conducted himself in the secondary defense that time he was sucked in on a forward pass.

The all-pro team will be a symposium of coaching opinion. And when it is fairly selected by the coaches' ballots it will be an official team, fairly arrived at. Only ten teams can provide material for the all-league team and all of those teams have been observed in action countless times by the men who will make the selections. Their picks will bear the stamp of authority.

Far be it from this department to differ with the selections of the coaches, and the guy who wouldn't accept their picks is just plain stubborn, but there's no crime in mulling the all-league possibilities.

For instance, inasmuch as the all-pro team must have a backfield, I was thinking that the coaches might do worse than name that destructive pair from Detroit, Clarke and Cabell; and the Redskins' Cliff Battles and the Green Bay Packers' Clarke Hinkle.

And if they are looking for a pair of ends, I respectcully submit the names of the Cardinals' Gaynell Tinsley and the Packers' Don Hutson. If it is tackles they are

Pitt Players Strike; Ask For Money

Team Rejects All Bowl Bids; Will Rest on Season Laurels.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 29.—The University of Pittsburgh's football factory went on strike tonight.

The Golden Panthers, Dr. Sutherland's powerhouse eleven that swept through everything in its gridiron wake this fall, will play no postseason games—Rose Bowl included—unless:

1. A cash consideration, "pocket money," between $150 and $200, be given each player during a possible trip to the West Coast or any other section of the country.
2. An immediate vacation of two weeks be granted the minute the athletic authorities sign for a postseason game.
3. That the entire squad of approximately 60 players, instead of the usual 34 members, be taken along.

These demands, climaxing the first collegiate football sit-down strike in the country, were presented to the university authorities late tonight by Al Barr, student manager. Dr. John Weber, secretary of the school and next in line to Chancellor John Bowman, however, asserted he and other members of the athletic council had not heard any such demands.

Reject All Bowl Bids.

The team met at noon today, at the request of Director of Athletics Jimmy "Whitey" Hagan, a former Pitt gridiron great. At that meeting, by a vote of a scant 16 to 15, the Panthers rejected any invitation to post-season games.

But that decision was complicated by the report later tonight that the players met again, apparently to reconsider their earlier rejection. University officials said they did not call the second meeting of the players.

Members of the team and Dr. John Sutherland, in revealing the noon vote, indicated they were tired after a grueling ten-game schedule and were satisfied to stand on their record of nine victories and a scoreless tie with Fordham.

However, like a bombshell, near midnight tonight came the report that the players had gone "on strike" against the Rose Bowl or any other "Bowl" and had listed their three demands. The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, the Steel City's only morning paper, carried a detailed account of the second meeting.

Recalled 1936 Episode.

The "demand" for pocket money recalled last New Year's episode on the Pacific Coast which opened a breach between Former Athletic Director Don Harrison and Coach Sutherland. Sutherland claimed he had given the players spending money from his own pocket after Harrison's refusal. The incident brought about Harrison's resignation.

No formal invitation to play in the Rose Bowl has been extended to Pitt by the University of California but informed sources revealed last night that Hagan and Sutherland had received "feelers" from the coast school.

A certified check for $50,000, offered by J. Curtis Sanford, president of the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, was refused by Coach Sutherland at Durham, N. C., last Saturday, where the Panthers completed their undefeated season by beating Duke. No indications were given that offers had been made by Sugar Bowl or Orange Bowl officials.

Pitt defeated Washington in last year's Rose Bowl game, the fourth for the Panthers. It was their first victory of the series.

Community Center Loop Holds Meeting

The Community Center Major Basketball League has called an organization meeting tonight at Central High at 8 o'clock.

Federal Bureau of Investigation, Delaware & Hudson, Lubeseal Oilers, Little Tavern, Young Democrats' Club of Maryland, Senate Beer, Columbia Beer and Beverage, Roslyn C. C. Camp and Flying Eagles are requested to have representation.

Pitt Choice Of Public for Rose Bowl

Nation-Wide Poll Picks Alabama Second, Fordham Third.

By the American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Nov. 29.—The Golden Bears of the University of California versus the Golden Panthers of the University of Pittsburgh.

That is the way the billing for Pasadena's Rose Bowl would read if the Nation's football followers were picking the antagonists, the American Institute of Public Opinion reported today.

The institute completed a survey which it conducted in every State during last week on the question: "What team would you like to see play California in the Rose Bowl?"

Pitt's Panthers, which have won top honors for several weeks in the Associated Press poll of sports writers, led all other national favorites with 32 per cent of the votes cast.

Second place went to unbeaten, untied Alabama, with 20 per cent of all mentions.

The Fordham Rams, unbeaten and tied only by Pitt, placed third, with 14 per cent. The decision of California athletic authorities regarding an opponent for the New Year's Day game had yet to be announced when the institute completed tabulation of the returns early today.

The following table shows the ranking and vote of the ten leaders:

	per cent		per cent
1. Pitt	32	6. Minnesota	3
2. Alabama	20	8. Nebraska	2
3. Fordham	14	7. Vanderbilt	2
4. Notre Dame	6	9. Mich. State	2
5. Dartmouth	4	10. Yale	2

Pitt leads on West Coast. Pitt took first place in every section except the South, where Alabama's Crimson tide led by a wide margin.

West Coast voters named Pitt first with 36 per cent, Fordham second with 18 per cent and Dartmouth and Alabama next with 9 per cent each.

Section by section the vote was:

New England States: Pitt, Dartmouth, Fordham.

Middle Atlantic States: Pitt, Fordham, Alabama.

West Central States: Pitt, Minnesota, Nebraska.

Rocky Mountain States: Pitt, Fordham, Alabama.

Pacific Coast States: Pitt, Fordham, Alabama-Dartmouth.

The institute poll was conducted as part of its current weekly survey on general issues. Voters were first asked: "Do you follow college football?" Only those voting "Yes" were included in the vote on Rose Bowl choices.

Grimes Hopes Mungo Deal Will Aid Club

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Van Mungo, the Brooklyn Dodgers' ace pitcher, is on the trading block, but he won't leave Ebbets Field unless the trade benefits the Dodgers. So says Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn manager, who is heading west for the baseball meetings to start the work of rehabilitating the Brooklyns.

MUNGO.

Grimes won't give away the big fire-baller for nothing. "What everybody seems to overlook," he said, "is the fact that Mungo is still the property of the Dodgers until such time as we are ready to trade him. And that won't happen unless the deal is a good one."

Ivory Hunters Gather For Baseball Meeting

Rumors of Trades Fly Thick and Fast as Minor League Moguls and Major Loop Scouts Converge on Milwaukee.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 29.—Trade rumors were almost as numerous as pints of beer in Milwaukee today as baseball's David Harums, big and small, piled into the Wisconsin metropolis for the annual ivory market rush. Though the minor league meetings do not open until Wednesday, most of the traders came two days in advance to bait their hooks.

The top rumor involved Ducky Medwick, National League batting champion of the St. Louis Cardinals. Though the deal has been denied by every interested party, it still persisted that Ducky had been traded to the New York Giants for Pitcher Hal Schumacher, Infielder Mel Ott and Catcher Gus Mancuso.

Another report, which bore more credit than the Medwick rumor, was that the Chicago White Sox already had purchased Harlan Clift from the St. Louis Browns.

Every team in both leagues, except the World Champion New York Yankees, was definitely in the market for new faces. Manager Joe McCarthy, of the champs, a great trader in his heyday, was expected to attend the market, but was in no mood for swapping or buying except to strengthen the already strong Yankee farm system.

As the major and minor delegates streamed into the city, there seemed a general agreement that Van Lingle Mungo, truant fireball ace of the Brooklyn Dodgers, definitely was to get a change of scenery. The word was out that Manager Burleigh Grimes had orders to trade his temperamental pitcher if the right deal came along.

The Chicago Cubs were reported to have an "inside" track on Mungo, though some figured the St. Louis Cards were very much in the market, too, although no one could tell what would happen to the temper of Manager Frank Frisch if he had Mungo and Dizzy Dean on the same ball club.

The Detroit Tigers, in the market for a good starting pitcher, were expected to swing one or two good deals, probably acquiring Pitcher Johnny Whitehead, of the Chicago White Sox, for Outfielder Gerald Walker. Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, incidentally, was the most sought-after man in the American League because of his abundance of good pitchers.

"They all want to load me down with third basemen because they hear I'm through playing that bag," said Jimmy, "but they'll have to talk fast and talk big to get a fast one over on me. I'm willing to talk business, but we're in pretty good shape and can do a lot of listening."

Insofar as the minor league convention was concerned, no hard battles were in prospect. The big business before the house was the creation of Class E circuits and the proposal to tighten the rules on recruiting of college players.

Under the new college proposal, no player could be signed up without the written consent of the college president until he or his class was graduated. Thus, if a boy attended college for one semester and dropped out, he could not be signed for three and a half years, unless the college president consented.

Basketball League Will Open Tonight

First-round hostilities in the Government-Y Basketball League will get under way at 7 o'clock tonight on the "Y" court when quintets from the Bureau of Standards and Internal Revenue face in the opening game.

Three games are scheduled for each Tuesday and Thursday nights through February 17, thus insuring each of the 12 teams entered of one game each week. All games will be played in the Y. M. C. A. gym.

Other games scheduled for tonight at PWA vs. Interstate Commerce Commission at 8:20, and A. G. O. (War Department) vs. Farm Credit Administration at 9:30.

Jankowski Better; Indications Point To Brain Injury

Ed Jankowski, Green Bay Packer fullback, was slightly improved last night, but he is "still on the border line," Emergency Hospital doctors announced.

X-ray examinations today will reveal if Jankowski suffered a fractured skull when tackled by two Redskins in the fourth quarter of the game at Griffith Stadium Sunday.

Attending doctors declared there were definite indications of a brain injury and Jankoweki's pulse was still a bit slow, but that developments were in his favor. Jankowski, who was irrational when taken to the hospital after the game, was conscious throughout yesterday and last night.

Street in St. Louis; Hints Ivory Deals

St. Louis, Nov. 28 (AP).—Gabby Street, newly appointed manager of the St. Louis Browns, arrived in town today and indicated several player "deals" are in the air.

5,000 Redskin Fans to Watch Giants' Game

Local Ticket Supply Is Exhausted Early; More Ordered.

A huge exodus of Washington fans to New York for the Eastern championship game between the Redskins and the Giants on Sunday at the Polo Grounds was indicated yesterday.

The special trains will leave Washington at 7:50 a. m. on Sunday, returning from New York immediately after the game.

Coach Flaherty gave his Redskins an off-day yesterday following their bruising battle with the Packers, but workouts will be resumed tomorrow.

The Redskins yesterday completed arrangements to train at the Westchester Country Club outside New York on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The team will leave here Wednesday, following a morning practice at Griffith Stadium.

Except for minor injuries, the Redskins emerged undamaged from the Packer fracas. Don Irwin was the most seriously hurt. He suffered a badly bruised back on the third play of the game and the Redskins were handicapped by his forced removal from the game. Slightly sprained ankles were suffered by Jim Barber, guard, and George Smith, end.

The Redskins will be out to win against the Giants for the simple reason that a tie with the Giants will be tantamount to a defeat. If the game Sunday ends in a deadlock, then to the Giants will go the White Sand and Master Lad Are Victims of Sponging; Detectives on Trail of Two Unidentified Men; All Horses Watched.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Nov. 29.—Horse tampering, which reached epidemic form here a year ago, flared again today when sponges were removed from the nostrils of two horses both entered in today's races. The horses were White Sand, due to compete in the fifth race, and Master Lad, scheduled to run in the sixth race. Both are the property of W. E. Johnson and are trained by C. P. Miles, jr.

The cruel treatment of the thoroughbreds was discovered this morning when White Sand, a 3-year-old filly, returned to the Johnson barn after a gallop around the track which is customary on the morning of a race. The filly was found to be breathing unnaturally and Trainer Miles applied to the stewards for permission to scratch her.

The stewards ordered an examination by the track veterinarian, Dr. J. J. McCarthy. He removed the obstruction and, the stewards then ordered that all horses in the stable be examined with the result that Master Lad was found to also have been a victim of tampering. The sponges were identical, made of silk, and of the same variety which

Big Time Sports Out of Luxury Class

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Nov. 29 (U.P.). Take big-time sports out of the luxury class and give them to the people:

The 1937 football season impressed me as one of the most prosperous in history, despite co-existent uncertainty in the stock market. I do not know yet if the college season established any new figures for attendance or gates. But the big crowds in all sections certainly were a noteworthy feature of the campaign. In professional football, promoters indicate that the National League is marching toward a new attendance record.

Newspapers seemed to give football more space; the radio certainly sold more time on the air, and never have I observed such general interest among our citizens—male and female, rich and poor.

As the curtain descended upon college football last Saturday, more than 102,000 spectators sat in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, watching the annual Army-Navy classic. They braved wet weather to witness this spectacle of pigskin pageantry. Many additional thousands would have gone had tickets been available. I understand that Phildelphia's bowl is second in size only to Chicago's Soldier Field, in this country. Soldier Field can be arranged to seat 120,000 fans for football and 150,000 for boxing.

Yes, we had 102,000 people at a football game on a rainy day in Philadelphia, and on the same rainy day there were nearly 65,000 in New York's Yankee Stadium to see Fordham play New York U. Only the week before, 85,000 attended the California-Stanford game at Palo Alto, on a rainy day. And the week before that more than 65,000 watched Army tangle with Notre Dame, on a rainy day. And the South Bend Stadium was jammed for the first time in its history when Pittsburgh played Notre Dame, on a snowy day.

Have you ever stopped to consider the thousands and thousands of people who would have gone to the games I mentioned and to other important contests, had the stadia been larger and ticket prices been scaled within reach of the low-salaried millions? Take the Army-Navy game for example. Had that extravaganza been staged in a stadium seating 200,000 or 250,000 and had the tickets been scaled from $10 tops down to 50 cents, I am quite sure the place would have been jammed—just as it was with 102,000 seats and tickets priced at $4.40.

America now is probably the most sports-minded country in the history of the world. Regardless of wealth or wage or geographical location, the men, women and children of our Nation have one bond—love of big-time sports. It wasn't always so. It wasn't so long ago that many sports, like football, golf, tennis, etc., were considered entertainment only for the upper classes.

Most of our municipal, State and national officials are aware, I believe, of America's great sports-consciousness. But I do not think they appreciate its importance. Otherwise they would take steps to make big-time competition less of a luxury and give it to the everyone. I mean to the men and women who make $18, $20, $25 or $30 a week, as well as to those who now can afford them. Most of our citizens come within the wage range I mentioned, and they cannot afford to pay $4.40 or $2.00 and quite often not $1.00.

I think the time has come when every large city in the country should begin considering building mammoth stadia that can seat a couple hundred thousand. Smaller cities could build in proportion. No longer does an important sports attraction draw only from the city in which it is staged. The automobile, reduced rates on buses and trains and even airplanes have given each city a vast hinterland of potential sports customers.

Let the cities build these big saucers on land now occupied by useless portions of their public parks. And let the men who build them make rigid provision that half the seats will be sold for a maximum of 50 cents or 75 cents—including taxes, service charges, and everything else—for any kind of a sports attraction, regardless of its significance or appeal. Let the promoters scale their prices to any top they desire for the other half of the stadium—for those who can afford to pay.

That's the only way you can take big-time sports out of the luxury class. I mean the feature attractions in all athletics: Football classics, world series, world championship prize fights, basketball championships, international polo, tennis championships, etc. That's the only way you can bring them to the masses of our people who now want to see them, but who can't afford it.

Smokies Obtain 3 Buc Players

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 28 (AP).—Edgar Allen, secretary of the Knoxville Baseball Club, said today the Smokies had obtained Pitchers Elbert Padgett and Andrew Sierra and Outfielder Robert Elliott from the Pittsburgh Pirates on option for the 1938 season.

Padgett, a right-hander, pitched for Gainesville in the Florida State League in 1936 and 1937, winning 24 games and losing 6 last season. Sierra, a left-hander, won 18 and lost 10 last year for Gainesville.

Although the stewards allowed Master Lad to be eliminated from the sixth race, Dr. McCarthy reported White Sand fit to run and the filly was a starter in the feature race, finishing 14 lengths behind the winner, Evergold.

Believing that someone connected with the stable either did the actual sponging or had knowledge of it, the stewards are directing their investigation that way. Meanwhile, track and State detectives are trying to locate two men, known to have been implicated in sponging elsewhere, who have been seen in this locality.

The motive for the sponging of White Sand and Master Lad was something of a mystery unless the vandals intended to sponge other horses in both races or were working for bookmakers who anticipated or were holding big wagers on the two horses. As far as could be learned, no attempts were made to sponge either Evergold, the likely favorite in the fifth race, or Aladdins Dream, choice in the sixth event.

From the appearances of the sponges, it was evident that they had been placed sometime this morning. In both cases, the sponges were removed cleanly and it is believed that neither horse will suffer ill effects, although White Sand did not run today in her customary good form.

Last fall, six horses were sponged at this track, Aneroid, owned by J. A. Manfuso, of Washington, was one of the victims and suffered a nasal infection that for a time threatened the career of the colt. In their efforts to "get to" Aneroid, the vandals sponged every horse trained by Dian Kerr, which resembled in any way the son of The Porter.

Another horse caught in the sponging splurge was Moon Side. However, Moon Side's sponge was discovered quickly and the horse went on the track and won the afternoon of its removal.

The stewards gave out the following statement:

"Upon the request of Trainer C. P. Miles, jr., to scratch the filly, White Sand, out of the fifth race today, the stewards sent Dr. McCarthy to examine her. Upon the doctor's report that one of the filly's nostrils was stopped up he was ordered to probe for a possible sponge which was done and one located. All other horses in the same stable were ordered examined with the result that the horse, Master Lad, was also found to have been sponged.

"By order of the Bowie management, every horse that has started at the present meeting has been examined when entering the paddock. This has been done to preclude the possibility of any unfit horse starting in a race. The fact that in all sponging cases it is most probable that someone connected with the stable must be a party to, or have knowledge of, the act, which is leading the stewards in their investigation that was started immediately.

"The presence in this locality of two noted sponge men caused the stewards to exercise the most extreme precautions and were therefore able to quickly determine that the affliction of the nostril was caused by a sponge. The greatest hope is felt that in the course of the next day or two convictions may be made of the guilty parties."

Pari-MutuelRepeal Sought in Boston

Boston, Nov. 29 (AP).—Escorted by State troopers, members of the New England Anti-Gambling Association, Inc., today filed with Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook an initiative petition seeking repeal of the law which permits pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog races.

The petition, which was said to contain 33,623 signatures, was brought to the State House in an armored truck.

Dr. Edwin W. Hadley, of Cambridge, explained this procedure was adopted because of "thefts of several petitions and orders of large sums of money to workers to turn over their lists of signatures for destruction."

Peery Fills Vacancy.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—Gov. Peery today announced the resignation of Walter H. Scott, of Roanoke, as a member of the State dry cleaners' board and the appointment of A. R. Kennett, of Roanoke, in his place.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IVORY TIP, $9.50, $5.50, $4.80; *AL'S PRIDE, $11.60, $8.10; *MARY'S MAY, $8.10.

IVORY TIP, always close to the pace, swung out from the rail into the better going and easily disposed of AL'S PRIDE. The latter, first away, set a good pace and held on willingly, but was no match for the winner. MARY'S MAY improved her position steadily and closed full of run.

DAILY DOUBLE—AFFIRMATION AND IVORY TIP—PAID $49.20.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:06½. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. Nancy Adams' ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WARLAINE, $6.40, $3.50, $2.60; BROWN MOTH, $3.80, $2.80; FLAT LANCE, $2.70.

WARLAINE, away fast, opened a good lead going to the turn, ran out at the final bend and finished under a drive on the extreme outside. BROWN MOTH worked his way to the leaders, but held safe by the winner. FLAT LANCE saved ground after being outrun and closed gamely.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,100. For all ages. Start good from stall. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:32½. Off at 3:34. Winner, Shandon Farm's ch. g. (8), by Ladkin—Golden Lassie II. Trained by J. J. Greely. Value to winner, $800; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EVERGOLD, $5.00, $2.80, $2.50; JEAN BART, $2.90, $2.70; HOLLUSCHICKIE, $3.10.

EVERGOLD, at home in the going, was off in front and was not seriously threatened, winning easily. JEAN BART was steadied for the half mile, rallied to a drive, but wasn't good enough. HOLLUSCHICKIE was closest to the pace in midstretch and was weakening at the end. WHITE SAND and SWIVELNECK were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:03½. Winner, E. J. Regan's br. g. (7), by Crusader—Pen Rose. Trained by E. J. Regan. Value to winner, $800; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALADDIN'S DREAM, $7.30, $4.50, $3.00; ALEXANDRINE, $6.10, $4.20; BUCK LANGHORNE, $4.40.

ALADDIN'S DREAM, allowed to settle into his stride, came between horses to improve his position with a bold rush to take command in midstretch and was kept to a drive to the end. ALEXANDRINE was sent to the front approaching the backstretch, was steadied along, but could not resist the winner. BUCK LANGHORNE moved up menacingly nearing the siretch, but faltered. THE RUNNER was used up chasing ALEXANDRINE'S pace. STOCKS went evenly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:32. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLASTONBURY, $5.20, $3.60, $3.00; YENOC, $5.60, $4.40; POMPEIUS, $9.60.

GLASTONBURY, steadied back going to the first turn, was sent around horses with good speed to gain forward position, disposed of TZIGANE to take command and was running easily at the end. YENOC was hard ridden throughout, dropped back entering the stretch and came again in the closing sixteenth, but was held safe. POMPEIUS was close to the pace from the start and held on well in the final drive. ILCHESTER came wide to improve his position, but hung in the closing test. BOSCOBEL tired.

Dupre Gets Unanimous Nod Over Manuel

Four Bouts Are Halted By Referee

By Bob Garrison.

Last week Tony Dupre won a host of friends; last night he won a mighty good fight from Baby Manuel to move one stride nearer the top of the local featherweight heap.

A unanimous 8-round decision awarded the Manchester, N. H. Italian over Manuel, one-time nationally rated southpaw, in the feature of Joe Turner's weekly fight show, earned Dupre a crack at Lou Gevinson, ruler of the District 128-pound-ers. And therein lies a success story.

It was only last week that Dupre, a baby-faced 20-year-old New Englander, made his debut here, winning an unimpressive decision. Within that short space the newcomer has managed, through an elimination process staged by matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, to work his way into a bout that several better-known boxers have long awaited, but in vain.

1,000 Fans Present.

One thousand spectators gathered at the W-street arena to watch the clever blond remove whatever doubt he had established in his first appearance that he is a worthy opponent for the slugging Gevinson. He showed that he can master the slants of a southpaw by defeating Manuel, itinerant Floridian, in a fiery scrap.

Dupre won nearly every round, so consistently effective was his counterpunching. He seldom allowed the dark-compexioned Southerner to land first, beating him to the punch with crisp right-hand crosses that kept Manuel, who forced the battle most of the way, on the cautious side.

Most of the bout was waged in the center of the ring, Manuel swinging with left-hand punches that apparently bothered Tony little. His system was to tie up the Baby in the clinches, score in the in-fighting, and beat him to the punch as they broke. Once in the fifth round he landed a stinging right that shook Manuel, but aside from that both fighters were fresh at the finish, although Tony was the winner by a wide margin.

Abrams followed the style set by the two dynamiting Greeks, Mamakos and Temes, by scoring another technical knockout. He won against some of the best pitching seen in the winter league thus far. Johnny Barrie 149-pound Pittsfield, Mass., former Golden Gloves champion, was his victim after 2 minutes and 35 seconds of the fourth round, in the semi-wound up listed for six rounds.

Barrie, a rangy kid with long hands, had but one punch—a swinging right that he found necessary to wind up before pitching. The popular Abrams knocked him out of the box and battered him all over the lot, taking but few of the "blind" swings in so doing.

Steve Mamakos Wins.

Barrie was no match for Abrams and only by sheer fortitude managed to hang on as long as he did. He was floored in every round and never hurt the former local amateur king. In registering his fourteenth consecutive victory since he turned pro last May, it is doubtful if the Jewish lad gained many new followers, but it wasn't exactly his fault. He had a hard time making a fight of it, being unable to land his effective short punches against Barrie who fought from long range.

Steve Mamakos, the Golden Greek, another Golden Glover who answered the call of the mazuma, essayed the role of an expert make-up artist in transforming the facial features of Young Chaney, Baltimore welterweight, into something resembling the best efforts of the late Lon, of movie fame.

Steve stood toe to toe with his foe, let him set a pace that eventually proved to fast, and was awarded the bout after 1 minute of the third round. The match was listed for six rounds. Mamakos weighed 145¾; Chaney, 153½. Mamakos floored Chaney once in the first round with a barrage of rights and lefts and from then on worked as though he was expecting the curtain call any moment.

It was give all and take nothing in the case of Joe Teemes, another local Greek gladiator, who did just that in winning a technical knockout verdict from Johnny De Carlo, another Baltimorean, after 1 minute and 50 seconds of the fifth round. It was scheduled for six rounds, with Teemes weighing 131, De Carlo, 129.

Maynard Daniels, heavyweight recruit in the money ranks, continued his winning ways at the expense of Joe Sofia, Baltimore. He was awarded a technical knockout verdict after 2 minutes and 35 seconds of the third round. Scheduled for four rounds, it nearly ended in both the first and second.

Sofia was saved by the bell both times after being floored with hard rights to the head and fell face forward each time. His last trip to the canvas came at a point when both he and the Marine were so groggy is was only a matter of which landed the first solid blow. It was a toe to toe slugging match all the way.

right to meet the Chicago Bears in the East-West play-off for the league championship.

Flaherty's team this season has been one of the two to beat the Giants. The New York club was unbeaten from the date that it bowed to Washington, 13-3, in the season's opener until it met up with the Chicago Bears.

That defeat by the Redskins in the opening game has been a sore spot with the Giants all season. In several interviews New York players have declared the Redskins were "a lucky outfit" and would "get their ears pinned back" when the two teams met again.

They Have Waited 14 Years for This

Toronto, Nov. 29 (AP).—William Hanna, an Irishman and sentimental, will stage an amateur boxing show Wednesday—23 years after it first was scheduled.

Hanna and nine friends organized the Maple Leaf Athletic Club August 2, 1914. They asked the Ontario government for a club charter and made plans for the show.

The next day Canada was at war. Permission for the fight card was granted but Hanna and his nine friends already had signed up for another fight. All, except Hanna, were fatally wounded overseas.

Just the other day Hanna received the charter of the Maple Leaf Athletic Club from the government. So the show goes on.

Pardon My Glove

Featherweight Champ Seeks 2 Titles.

By Jack Paulus
Sports Editor of The Post.

Henry Armstrong, who became the featherweight champion of the world when he defeated Washington's Petey Sarron in New York last October, will never defend his title.

The cokee-colored Californian, described by many sports experts as the "wonder fighter of the decade," will campaign for the lightweight and welterweight crowns but does not plan to hold all three titles at the same time as other reports have indicated.

This news was obtained in Washington last night from sources close to Eddie Meade, veteran fight man and manager of "Homicide Henry."

Two reasons prompt this action on Meade's part, our informants reveal. First: the fact that there is no one in the featherweight division who would be a good match for the champion or who has any drawing power. Second: Meade's belief that Armstrong is at his best when he doesn't strain to make weight and, in this condition, can "take" anyone in either the lightweight or the welterweight division.

Armstrong's recent knockout victory over Billy Beauhuld, high-ranking lightweight, placed the California Negro in line for a shot at Champion Lou Ambers. Cagey Eddie Meade, however, is taking his boy out through the provinces. Matches are almost signed with Tommy Spiegal, Uniontown lightweight, and Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburg welter.

Just 25 years old, Armstrong is already heralded throughout the Nation's sports pages as a "super-fighter." The power of his knock-out punch is already becoming part of America's sports legend. His ability to provide coma is amazing. During the first 11 months of 1937 he knocked out 24 of his opponents while scoring 25 straight victories.

Armstrong is now the third Negro boxing champion of the world and the third Negro to hold the feather title. George Dixon was the first, in the nineties, when he won the title by defeating Nunce Wallace, a Briton, on June 27, 1890. He lost it to "Terrible Terry" McGovern on January 9, 1900, in an eight-round knockout.

The tradition of Negro champions includes such illustrious ring greats as John "Little Artha" Johnson, Battling Siki, Gorilla Jones and Joe Gans.

Rumors have been floating around Washington the last several days that when, and if, the new fight promotional venture gets going at the Rialto theater, Henry Armstrong will be its first attraction. No confirmation of this information has been made, although we think Meade will probably not come into Washington for anyone but Joe Turner and Goldie Ahearn.

Our recent column on the Leach Cross-Dick Hyland 45-round fight brought an interesting letter—from Leach Cross himself. Cross is practicing dentistry in the Bronx and writes:

"I was one of the few who went into the fight game without the slightest thought of ever making good or making money. I just wanted to be a fighter. Hell, I was always fighting in the streets anyway; so what did I have to lose?

"I never floored Hyland once in the entire fight. Whereas, when I fought him in New York after that long fight, I not only beat him but floored him. Then, before the long fight, which was on June 26, 1909, I fought him in New York June 8, 1908, and I beat him so easily that I was fooled into believing I would knock him out in a longer fight. Therefore, I agreed to this 45-rounder—always thinking I would stop him in ten.

"I did win the first 23 rounds but after that—let's not speak of it—he floored me so often I resembled an elevator—so many ups and downs.

"I may as well give you more of it. I omitted to tell you that I only received $346 for the fight and also lost $500 betting on myself—was so sure I'd win. Then also it cost me about $500 more for traveling and training expenses. A costly fight—not counting the lacing I took. Sincerely,

LEACH CROSS, D. D. S.

Mt. Rainier Court Team Starts With But Lone Veteran

With only one regular returning, Mount Rainier High School's basketball prospects are anything but bright as the Mounts begin practice for a 22-game schedule, the first game being with Greenbelt High School on December 13. Greenbelt, the model community, will be entering Prince George's competition for the first time.

Gregory O'Connor, lanky center of the Mount Rainier team that hung up 22 consecutive victories a year ago before tasting defeat, is the letterman upon which the Mounts will be depending to build a formidable aggregation. Along with O'Connor, during the first practice session, 20 other aspirants turned out in the mope of gaining a regular starting position.

The best prospects at present are James Miller, Kenneth Taylor, Robert Crump, Leonard Iager, Frank Landolt and James Glynn. But the following lads are still in the running: Tom Newell, Richard Klopher, James Green, John Mathias, John Pashley, Augustine Catalina, Leonard Henry, George Buckholtz, Oscar Link, Billy Campbell, James Thorpe, Thomas Gardner, Norman Crone and Earnest Powell. The schedule:

December 13, Greenbelt, home; 14, Gonzaga, home; 17, Roosevelt, away; 20, Gonzaga, away; 23, Alumni, home; January 7, Washington and Lee, away; 11, Greenbelt, away; 14, Kendall, home; 18, Briarly, away; 25, Montgomery Blair, home; 28, Bladensburg, home.

February 1, Laurel, away; 4, Washington and Lee, home; 8, Briarly, home; 15, Kendall, away; 18, Bladensburg, away; 25, Laurel, home; 26, Montgomery Blair, away.

after, the Redskins have a guy named Turk Edwards and the Bears have Stydahar. As for the ers and Fortmann, of the Bears, and you can have the rest. Mel Hein, of the Giants, is my center and will probably be the coaches'.

This department's personal selections probably won't exactly satisfy New York, which has come to regard Tuffy Leemans as an all-league fixture, but Leemans hasn't exactly been a sensation this year, chiefly because he has been hurt. And those folks who saw Sammy Baugh pass and gallop against the Packers Sunday may also work up a nice case of indigestion if he is omitted from the all-league team.

As for Battles, his ground-gaining leadership in the league, despite the fact that he missed the opening game, is no myth. There are only nine teams in the league that would bid furiously for Battles if he were placed on the market. And Dutch Clarke has to be the quarterback. He's not only the finest football player in the league. He's a head coach out there in the Detroit backfield. Penalties for coaching from the sidelines is never a fear of the Lions.

D. C. Women's Golf Association to Meet

The District Women's Golf Association will hold its annual luncheon and business meeting on Thursday at Kenwood Club. All members of the association are invited to attend the luncheon at 12:30 and the meeting that follows at 2 p. m.

All winners in the various cup play throughout the season will be introduced, in addition to the club champions.

The new slate of officers will be presented and acted upon, with the 1937 board expected to remain in office. Other routine business will come up before the association members.

2 Colorado Aces Honored

Denver, Nov. 29 (AP).—Undefeated, untied Colorado University sent three of its stars to the 1937 Associated Press All-Rocky Mountain Conference football team today.

Two of them—Byron (Whizzer) White, Phi Beta Kappa quarterback and the Nation's top scorer with 122 points, and Gene Moore, 200-pound center—were picked unanimously by the coaches, sports writers and officials who helped to line up the team.

White, Moore, Schleckman and Ferdinand Dreher, Denver University's 206-pound end from Jonesboro, Ark., were repeaters from last year's all-star team.

The all-conference teams:

First Team.	Position.	Second Team.
Dreher (Denver)	E	Lavington (Colo.)
Schleckman (Utah)	T	Brill (Colo.)
Smith (Colorado)	G	Gillespie (B.Y.)
Moore (Colorado)	C	Scudder (Colo.)
Barnhart (Gr. St.)	G	McGarry (Utah)
Woudenberg (Den.)	T	Christofferson (Den.)
McDonough (Utah)	E	Mowry (Colo. Col.)
White (Colorado)	H.B.	Saffo (B.Y.)
Malo (Denver)	H.B.	Snow (Utah)
Magnussen (U.St.)	H.B.	Cheney (Colo.)
Strinzham (B.Y.)	F.B.

Seniors Are Set For Golf Event

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 29 (AP).—Forty golfers who have attained the age of 50 or more put finishing touches on their game today for the inaugural of the Professional Golfers Association seniors' tournament.

Ranking names of golf of yesteryear were entered for the $2,000 purse posted by the P. G. A. in the tournament starting tomorrow.

Three Nations Are Represented On Rassle Card

Poland, Greece and Ireland will be well represented on Thursday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena, according to the card completed yesterday.

The headliners will be Ed Don George, former world's champion; Steve (Crusher) Casey, the County Kerry Irishman; Len Macaluso, former Colgate all-American, and Jack Singer, California badman.

Don George meets Singer and Casey opposes Macaluso in double wind-up matches, one fall to a finish.

Roanoke to Play 10-Game Schedule

Salem, Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—The Roanoke College Maroons will play a ten-game football schedule, including four home games, in 1938.

The Maroons will open their season September 17 with Newberry College and close Thanksgiving Day, November 24, with King College in Bristol.

The schedule renews Roanoke's rivalry with Georgetown University and Randloph-Macon College. The Maroons will engage Georgetown at Washington October 8 and the Jackets at Salem October 29.

Army's Change of Tactics Beat Navy, Says Kelley

By Larry Kelley.

Perhaps it's just as well that this most unpredictable of football seasons has come to an end. My head is not only bloody, but bowed. Of the five games I tried to expert last Friday, one ended in a tie, and I split even on the others, losing two and winning the same number.

The first few weeks I tried this crystal gazing, it was just too, too ducky, but my crystal has been fogged recently (because of the bad weather, no doubt) and I haven't been doing so well. Anyhow, my complete record for the season is 18 won, 9 lost, 2 tied.

I'm still pretty damp from sitting through that Army-Navy downpour in Philadelphia last Saturday. To tell the truth, the football was almost as wet as the weather, neither team showed anything in the way of a sustained offense, although both were stubborn on the defense and the tackling was deadly.

Army learned early in the game that it wasn't going to get anywhere through the Navy line, and so the Cadets took to the air to set up the only score of the game. With the ball on Navy's 44, Ryan faded back and shot a flat pass to Schwenk, who ran to the 19. Then Long took the ball on a reverse, galloped to his left and heaved a left-handed diagonal pass to Ryan, who was knocked out on the 2. Craig came into the game for Wilson and bulled his way across on the first play.

That was all the scoring and the only thing that looked like a score. Navy opened the third period by marching 48 yards to the Army 16 but they lost the ball on downs at this point and never threatened again.

* * * *

Both teams were hampered by the wet ball and the heavy turf. Army had a decided edge in punting, with both Wilson and Craig performing nobly. In the early minutes of the first quarter, Wilson four times kicked out of bounds inside the Navy 20 to keep the Middies back on their heels.

Craig was Army's chief offensive gun, with Wood and Cooke gaining what honors were to be gained for the Middies. The boys in blue played almost the entire game without their best running and passing back, Bill Ingram, who got in for only the last three minutes.

* * * *

Fordham's Rams further strengthened their case for the Rose Bowl by gaining a 20-7 edge over a hard-fighting N. Y. U. outfit. Thus the Rams ended the campaign unbeaten and tied only by mighty Pitt.

Scorning to notice that it was raining overhead and muddy underfoot, the Rams trotted out their razzle-dazzle offense to fine effect. Two of the three Fordham touchdowns were scored on passes, and N. Y. U.'s sole marker came through the air. It was raining rain in Philadelphia, but it must have been raining Violets at the Yankee Stadium.

* * * *

Among the rumors and counter-rumors that are flying about, it is said that Fordham will not be invited to the Rose Bowl. This may be the case. One thing is certain, however, the Rose Bowl team will be chosen from among Fordham, Pitt and Alabama. I have seen the first two and am unable to find a great deal of difference.

Fordham, to my mind, is the finest defensive unit in the entire country. Playing a hard schedule, the Rams allowed just 16 points—two touchdowns and a field goal. Pitt may have an edge on the offense with Goldberg and Stebbins, but the Maroon sophomores have been improving from game to game.

Alexander (the Great) Wojiechichowicz is the finest center I have ever seen, and there isn't a weak spot in the entire line-up.

* * * *

Double-crossing all the experts, Columbia refused to roll over and play dead dog and fought a superior Stanford team to a scoreless deadlock. This is the third time the two teams have met, and although Stanford was favored in all three games, the Indians have still to win their first victory over the Light Blue.

The little Lions saved a very bad season by their work in the finale. They won only two games, while losing five and tying two.

* * * *

Pitt did the expected by invading the lair of Duke's Blue Devils and coming out on the long end of a 10-0 count. This gave the Panthers an undefeated record for the season. But the reports of this one added little luster to Pitt's glittering reputation. Such is the power of the Panthers that a mere 10 points, all of which were set up by Duke fumbles, fails to sound too impressive.

The Devils kept Goldberg pretty well smothered, but his sophomore replacement, Dick Cassiano, got loose for the Panther touchdown. Capt. Souchak added the other points with a 25-yard field goal.

Bullet Bill Osmanski romped out of the infirmary and all over Gill Dobie's Boston College Eagles. Osmanski, one of the ranking backs of the East, was the spearhead of an attack that netted Holy Cross 26 points while Boston College was getting none.

And that's the end of the season. I have put my crystal ball away in morthballs and the darn thing has gotton so foggy that I can't tell which is which. Maybe it's just as well.

Wheat Prices Advance After Early Tumble

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 29.—Right-about-face action of holders of wheat futures lifted prices 2½ cents a bushel from early bottom levels today and more than overcame losses.

Pessimistic unofficial reports of crop conditions in Argentina were in part responsible for the upward shift of wheat values, and so too was a big decrease of the United States wheat visible supply total, as well as a decided falling off in the amount of wheat afloat for importing countries.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅝ higher compared with Saturday's finish, December 90⅞@91, May 89⅞@90, July 85⅛@85¼. Corn ⅛@1⅛ down, December 52½@52⅝, May 56@56⅛, oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up, rye at ¼@½ decline and provisions showing 5 to 15 cents setback.

Business Loans Drop $55,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Business retrenchment showed up today in a $55,000,000 decrease in loans for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes reported by member banks to the Federal Reserve Board for the week ended November 24.

The trend of these business loans has been irregular for the last few weeks after a year of steady increases, but last week's decrease was one of the largest to date.

Demand was limited and prices responded to a small volume of Southern and Scattering offers. There was little inclination to trade pending Washington developments on the farm bills now under debate in both Houses.

Business Limps With Burdens, Survey Finds

Curbs Must Be Lessened, Says National Industrial Conference Board.

New York, Nov. 29.—Further curtailment reflected by nearly all indices of production and trade during October and the first half of November has dispelled any tendency to minimize the seriousness of the current recession, according to the latest monthly review of business conditions by the National Industrial Conference Board.

No attempt to forecast future developments is made in the board's view, but the opinion is expressed that until present restrictions on capital formation and investment are lessened, it is doubtful that we shall experience anything better than a "limping" recovery. Investors are particularly loath to place their funds in industries which seem most vulnerable to intense regulation or to eventual socialization, especially when their chances of realizing net profits are already reduced by the present heavy tax burden. Management itself is discouraged from retaining a portion of income for investment in capital goods.

Mention is made, however, in the conference board's review of certain salutary developments in the current situation. First among these is the growing realization on the part of Congress that the present tax laws seriously impair the ability of private enterprise to pull the country out of its 8-year-old depression. From some quarters, at least, there is finally coming the admission that the Federal budget must soon be balanced. The effectiveness and desirability of further "pump-priming" is being seriously questioned. The practical inability of both railroads and utility companies to finance plant expansion under present conditions is also receiving serious consideration.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift Irregularly Lower in Moderate Trading With Unfavorable Trade News.

New York, Nov. 29.—The stock market could not stand too much prosperity and prices ended irregularly lower, after the surprising strength of last Saturday. Sales volume was around 1,150,000 shares, but little more than the Saturday volume. United States bonds were firm and dollars moved a little above all currencies except the French franc. December wheat rose half a cent a bushel to 90⅞ cents.

Stock prices were irregular at the opening and soon gave up fractions, but sellers lacked the courage of their convictions and even the active issues, as Steel, Chrysler and General Electric found support after going down a point or so below the previous closing prices. More of a setback on technical trading grounds was expected by some operators as a result of the sharpness of the advance in the short Saturday session. On the news side the bulls worked at a slight disadvantage, having to explain away the fall in steel mill operations, estimates by a number of railroad presidents of lower gross revenues and net income (the estimates being given in connection with the petition to the I. C. C. for higher freight rates), and other tidbits of trade recession news, including perseverance of strikers here and there.

Midday Lows.

Prices were around the worst in early afternoon, when declines of a point to a point and a half were shown in Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears, Santa Fe, Bethlehem and General Electric. Public utility stocks on the whole had a steady tone and the rails kept close to shore, held by the hope that as a result of the rate hearings the Interstate Commerce Commission will grant them higher charges, which no one disputes they sorely need, but which some are beginning to doubt can come quickly enough to stave off financial reorganization for a few of the roads.

Gains of more than a fraction were not particularly numerous, and most of them, running to 1 and 2 points, were to be found among the preferred issues. In that direction were the preferred of American Locomotive, Santa Fe, Consolidated Edison, Spiegel, Republic Steel, Pere Marquette and Goodyear. Scattered common shares to rise 1 to 4 points were Beech-Nut, Hershey, Roan Antelope and Lone Star Cement. Farm implements were badly served, falling 1 to 4 points. Silvers and golds were firm.

Costs Choked Recovery.

If words count for anything, more satisfaction should be got from President Roosevelt's special message on housing than on anything he has said in a long time. Critics will be quick to point out the things that might have been said, and it will not be overlooked that some of the ills which the President notes were largely of his own causing. It is, nevertheless, encouraging to hear from the President some economic common sense.

Noting that the recovery in trade so far has taken place without any aid from building construction to speak of, and admitting that Government efforts to aid "have not been satisfactory," and that instead of a seasonal rise in housing in the spring and summer there was an early downturn, the President declared, "This was one of the principal reasons why general business failed to forge ahead during the latter part of the year." He went further and said: "It is now clear (as indeed it was clear to everyone but the Washington authorities many months ago) that we cannot have a strong revival of housing construction on the terms that were exacted by industry and labor last spring. The rise in hourly wage rates and in material prices was too rapid and too great for the consumer to bear. A similar rise in costs likewise checked production and buying in other industries as well."

At Long Last.

That is an economic "mouthful" of sense, and it would be pointless to disagree with the President when he said that "manifestly no industrial or labor groups would deliberately adopt a policy that would react to their own disadvantage," for that is exactly what was done. It would be equally useless to say that the strong encouragement given the C. I. O., for example, last winter and spring by the Government was largely responsible for the all-round rise in manufacturing costs that did so much to break up the recovery, were it not that the Government is still playing the game. President Roosevelt, now that he realizes that high costs, carrying the risk of operations without profit, did much to bring on business recession, should be the first to backtrack on his proposal to increase the handicap to business with the Black-Connery wages and hours bill.

Rising Costs.

Another factor in the rise of prices on top of the increasing costs which is proving to be "more than consumers can bear" most certainly is mounting taxation. That also can be stopped with resolute action on the budget. Housing is languishing (1) because it costs too much to build, regardless of how easily or how cheaply mortgages can be secured from private or from Government sources, and (2) because those who can afford to build fear to take the cash out of the banks because they are so uncertain of an economic future wrapped up in a program of social reform, confiscatory taxation and other "objectives" of no one knows what nature.

Steel Operations Drop to 3-Year Low

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 1.4 points to 29.6 per cent of capacity, the lowest point in the past three years, and compared with 31.0 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 48.6 per cent, while a year ago the rate was 75.9 per cent of capacity.

Stock Exchange Willing to Alter Setup, Gay Says

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 29.—Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, tonight warned against excessive regulation and "experimentation," and promised that when emproved methods can be found by impartial study, the exchange would adopt them.

His statement was issued in answer to the ultimatum by William O. Douglas, chairman of the SEC, last Tuesday, that the exchange must reorganize or face more drastic regulation.

Gay quoted again from his annual report last August, in which he warned that regulation was making the market dangerously illiquid, and asserted:

"I would be less than candid if I failed to say that recent market developments have confirmed my belief that, in the interests of the public and the investor, the question of what are wise restrictions upon the scope of the market is an urgent one."

Exchange Study Near.

In further comment on his annual report, the exchange president said:

"I do not contend that the recent decline in market prices is to be attributed to the condition of the market to which I called attention, or indeed to any single cause."

In answer to Douglas' demand for exchange administration changes, Gay said, "I am about to appoint, with the approval of the governing committee, a special committee to study this whole matter and to report as promptly as possible."

Douglas had called for transfer of exchange management from member committees to a salaried and impartial expert executive personnel.

Gay indicated agreement with Douglas on management by salaried personnel, at least in part, saying:

"I think that in the orderly development of exchange management, further progress should be made in the direction of the transfer of greater administrative responsibilities to executives acting under committee supervision."

Believes Co-operation Is Need.

The exchange president said his comment on the Douglas statement, was "in the friendliest spirit, and in the firm belief that co-operation between the exchange and the commission is essential."

Referring to Douglas' statement the exchange has been functioning primarily under its own rules, Gay continued:

"That is true; but it is also true that these rules prior to their adoption by the exchange had been the subject of almost continuous interchange of views between the commission and the exchange.

"The exchange stands ready to continue this interchange of views with the object of constantly improving trading methods. The exchange is as anxious as the commission to prevent any form of manipulation or abuse."

Exchange Aware of Duties.

Referring to the fact that Douglas' warning had come after a drastic decline in the market, he said:

"This is particularly a time for co-operation in constructive effort in order to avoid any impediments to full recovery."

He said his experience had convinced him the exchange "is fully alive to its public functions; that it is constantly improving its methods; that it stands ready to co-operate with public authorities in every way for the better performance of those functions."

At the same time, he expressed belief "the public interest can best be served by leaving to the exchanges, under supervision of the commission, much of the regulation of their own business."

Shorts Study Underway.

Taking up the charge made by Douglas with respect to the influence of short selling by floor traders or "professionals," Gay said the exchange had recently invited an independent research organization (Twentieth Century Fund) to make a complete investigation of this "controversial question."

"If this investigation discloses evils which can be remedied," Gay said, "the exchange will not hesitate to take prompt action."

A more spirited defense was made by Gay to the SEC chairman's strictures on activities of members who act as specialists and the odd-lot dealers who cater to the small public traders and investors.

"So far as we can see," continued Gay, "they are the fairest means which have yet been devised for handling the vast number of public orders to buy and sell securities."

"If in the search for improvement better methods can be found the exchange will adopt them. We do not feel justified, however, in undertaking more experimentation because we know that the general public would pay the price of mistakes and that price might be high."

Concerning the statement by Douglas that trading by exchange members for their own account can be excessive and thus exert an artificial force stimulating or accentuating price fluctuations, Gay said:

"Certain statistics on trading for particular days are cited in support of this general conclusion. Statistics for other days could be cited to support an opposite conclusion.

"We do not believe that dependable conclusions can be drawn from such comparisons. We think that an impartial study of all relevant facts would demonstrate that the transactions of professionals are an essential part of an orderly and serviceable market for securities."

Bob Burns Says—

Uncle Ukle came to my house with a suitcase in his hands and he says "Robin, I jest can't live with my wife another day." He said "I've stood her selfishness for 26 years. After I'm gone, I want you to go over and tell her, but break it to her, gently—I know she loves me and if you tell her suddenly, the shock will probably kill her!" Well, I went over to his house and there was Aunt Puney, sittin' on the front porch. When I told her Uncle Ukle had gone, she jumped to her feet and says "You mean he ain't comin' back?" I nodded and she wheeled and started into the house.

I grabbed her by the arm and I says, "What's your hurry, Aunt Puney? You ain't gonna do nothin' desperate, are you?" She said, "For goodness sake, no! Now I'm going in and make a pot of coffee the way I like it!"

Thrift, 41, Dies; Was Master of U.S. Navy Band

D. C. Native Had Been Service Musician for Twelve Years.

William C. Thrift, 41, bandmaster of the U. S. Navy Band, who returned Friday from a 10,000-mile tour with the band, died unexpectedly Saturday night at his home, 474 F street northwest, it was announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

The body was taken to the Naval Hospital where, after an investigation, the coroner, Dr. A. Magruder McDonald, yesterday issued a temporary certificate without stating the cause of death. It was stated this was routine procedure to expedite funeral proceedings and that a certificate would be issued when the inquiry was closed. The cause of death is believed to be heart disease.

Bandmaster Thrift, a native of Washington, had served 12 years in his post with the Navy Band and before that served 7 years in the Marine Corps. Besides his widow, Mrs. Emma C. Thrift, a daughter, Coral, 5, and a on Wlliam C. Thrift, jr., 9, survive.

Funeral services will be held at his home at 10 a. m. tomorrow and at 11 a. m. in the Fort Myer chapel of Arlington Cemetery, where burial will take place.

Charles A. Hinkel Funeral Set Today

Funeral services for Charles A. Hinkel, 56, who died Saturday, will be held at 11 a. m. today at his home, 1719 Webster street northwest. Burial will be in Abbey Mausoleum, where Masonic rites will be held.

A native of Washington, Mr. Hinkel was president and treasurer of the E. P. Hinkel & Co., Inc., carpet firm, at 600 Rhode Island avenue northeast. Pallbearers at the funeral today will be veteran employes of his firm.

Mr. Hinkel was a member of the Washington Board of Trade, the Optimist Club and St. John's Lodge of Masons.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Edna Wade Hinkel; one brother, Frederick P. Hinkel, and four sisters, Miss Anna A. Hinkel, Mrs. Edward C. Wells and Mrs. Wilbur Zepp, all of Washington, and Mrs. J. Frederick Meyer, Columbus, Ohio.

Miss Emily W. Dyer To Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Miss Emily White Dyer, former Washington resident, will be held at 11 a. m. today at Gawlers' undertaking establishment, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Miss Dyer died Sunday at Bentnor, N. J. A native of Washington she was the daughter of the late Col. and Mrs. George W. Dyer. She had spent the last 20 years abroad and at her home in Bentnor.

Surviving are two brothers, Frank L. Dyer, of Atlantic City, N. J., and Leonard H. Dyer, of New York City.

Boy, 6, Names Man Who Slew Father and Mother, Beat Him

Farmer Confesses, Claims Agreement for 'Duel' Over Ownership of Wheat; Says Killing Family Was Part of Pact.

By the United Press.

Columbus, Mont., Nov. 29.—Six-year-old Larry Kuntz, whose childish prattle revealed the slaying of his mother and father, today named the man who shot them to death and beat him with a pistol butt.

The man he accused—Frank Robideau, 55, a farmer—confessed the slayings to County Attorney P. R. Heily. Tonight he was formally charged with murder.

"Robideau did it," the boy told his doctor in the hospital where he is recovering from the head injuries he suffered when he was beaten. The doctor notified Sheriff Frank Murphy, and Robideau's arrest followed.

At Billings, the confessed slayer signed a rambling, disjointed statement in which he said he and Mike Kuntz agreed to a duel after an argument over ownership of 180 bushels of wheat.

Part of the agreement, the confession said, was that if Robideau won the duel, "I would kill Kuntz's wife and kid."

Later, he said, Kuntz, 35, and his 29-year-old wife and the boy drove out on a road between Columbus and Wheat Basin.

Kuntz "got yellow" and refused to go through with the duel, Robideau said. He shot him through the back of the head. He then killed the woman and beat the boy, he confessed.

The slayings occurred Friday night. Saturday, the lad crawled from the car, stopped a passerby and said: "There isn't anybody home because they killed mother and daddy last night." (Picture on Picture Page.)

Former Congress Library Aide Dies

Shrewsbury, N. J., Nov. 29 (AP).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Francis Joseph Reynolds, 70, former reference librarian of the Congressional Library, Washington, editor and one-time Harvard football player.

He was born in Montgomery, Ala., received his early education in France and Germany and was graduated from Harvard in 1888. From 1899 until 1917, he served the Congressional Library. For the next 16 years he was book editor for P. F. Collier & Son, publishers, and at his death was head of the readers' research bureau of the Crowell Publishing Co.

Miss O'Neill Rites Set for Tomorrow

Miss Bridget Cecelia O'Neill, former employe of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, died Sunday at Sibley Hospital.

Miss O'Neill had been employed with the bureau more than 50 years at her retirement five years ago. She was born in Washington, daughter of the late James and Elizabeth O'Neill. She lived at the Lindbergh Apartment, 200 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

She leaves a brother, William O'Neill and a sister, Mrs. George A. Garner, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Garner, 9 K street northwest, followed by requiem mass at 10 a. m. at St. Aloysius Church, North Capitol and I streets.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Make Sure of Your Discards.

Most bridge players have heard the saying: "A hundred thousand Englishmen have thrown themselves in the Thames because they forgot to draw trumps." This has given most players the impression that declarer's first duty is to draw trumps. This is correct procedure in the majority of trump declarations, but there are many hands in which some play in the side suits must be made before trumps are tackled. Today's hand is an example.

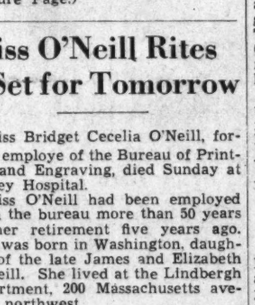
South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

West opened a low heart; dummy ducked, and East won the trick with the ten. A low heart was returned, and South trumped. South then led to dummy's Ace of clubs, in order to take the trump finesse. This lost to West, who returned a club.

Now, declarer's cause was lost. He had no way of avoiding the loss of a trick in every suit.

South should have seen the danger of losing a club trick if he took out one of his stoppers in that suit, in order to tackle the trumps. After trumping the second round of hearts, he should have taken steps at once to obtain a discard for his losing club.

Proper play would have been to lay down the Ace of diamonds, and then lead another diamond toward dummy's Queen. West would have taken his King of diamonds, but then dummy's Queen would have afforded a discard for the club loser.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 N T	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

High Officials Attend Funeral Of T. T. Walters

Sen. Pope, Representatives Clark, White at Rites for Ickes' Aide.

Funeral services for Theodore T. Walters, First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, who died Saturday at Naval Hospital, were held yesterday in Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Caldwell, Idaho.

In memory of Mr. Walters, the Interior Department was closed from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. yesterday.

Among those who attended the funeral services were many stockmen from the West. They had come to Washington to attend a grazing conference called by Mr. Walters.

Active pallbearers were Senator James T. Pope and Representatives D. Worth Clark and Compton I. White, of Idaho; Charles West, Undersecretary of the Interior; Addison T. Smith, former Idaho Congressman, and Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Honorary pallbearers included Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho; William E. Lee, Interstate Commerce Commissioner; Representative Paul Creever, Wyoming; Frank Keenan, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; John Page, Reclamation Commissioner; Fred Johnson, head of the General Land Office; F. R. Carpenter, director of grazing; Roscoe Fertich, commissioner of war materials in the Interior Department; Dr. W. C. Mendenhall, director of the Geological Survey; Arno B. Cammerer, head of the National Park Service; E. K. Burlew, administrative assistant, Department of the Interior; Dr. John W. Finch, director of the Bureau of Mines, and Harry Slattery, personal assistant to Walters.

Mrs. Groves, 87, Police Captain's Mother, Is Dead

Mrs. Harriet L. Groves, 87, mother of Police Capt. Hugh H. Groves, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hettie E. King, 1619 North Edgewood street, Arlington, Va.

Besides her daughter and Capt. Groves of the Eleventh Precinct, Mrs. Groves leaves four sons, Milton B. Groves, attached to police headquarters, and William C., Turner A. and Wise H. Groves, of Falls Church, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Ada Willingham, Alexandria, Va.

Born in Remington, Va., Mrs. Groves, widow of William Groves, came to Arlington when her husband retired 13 years ago. Since his death in 1927 she had lived with her daughter. She was a charter member of the Baptist Church at Remington.

Mrs. Groves died a few weeks after the death of an 18-year-old granddaughter, who bore her name. The girl, daughter of William C. Groves, was killed by an automobile near her grandmother's home.

Funeral services for Mrs. Groves will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the Columbia Baptist Church at Falls Church, Va.

B. F. Edwards, 73, Dies in Hospital

A native of Garnett, Kans., where his father was a State senator, Mr. Edwards taught school in Missouri as a young man. He came to Washington in 1890 and after being employed in the War and Treasury departments entered the real estate business in 1896.

As president of the West Woodridge Development Co., from which he retired a year and a half ago, Mr. Edwards was a pioneer in the development of Villa Park, now Woodridge and West Woodridge. He was also one of the first residents of Langdon, Va., and aided in the development of real estate in that section.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Amanda J. Edwards, a daughter, Mrs. W. V. Renner, wife of Maj. W. V. Renner, U. S. A., and a son, Maj. C. E. Edwards, U. S. A. (retired), survive.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Agriculture Local No. 2, United Federal Workers of America (C. I. O. affiliate) rebukes Japan for "ruthlessly killing innocent persons, including little children," and urges a boycott of Nipponese products as "one method of terminating such warfare."

The C. I. O. in national convention urged the boycott of certain classes of Japanese exports, these seeming more or less of the line which would mitigate against American workers. Now the local (one of the most outspoken ones the C. I. O. has) goes the whole hog, pledging "ourselves not to purchase the products of Japan," obviously meaning all products.

The resolution contained some fairly pithy language: "Such militaristic action is not only a direct violation of international treaties but an atrocity on human beings that must be stopped," it stated in part, adding that a copy be sent the Washington Labor Peace Committee.

The same local comments—and comes out against—the bill "to prevent profiteering in time of war" as introduced by Representative Sheppard and Hill in the last Congress. The local thinks that "if passed it gives the President the power to demoralize existing labor standards" . . . "Although the bill places a tax of 95 per cent on all income above the average enjoyed during the three years prior to entry by the United States into war, during these pre-war years accelerated industrial production would far exceed peacetime levels to swell industry's profits during the war also" . . . "The President's authority to fix prices would be nullified if capital should strike as in the last war, when the industrialists imposed their own prices on the Government" . . . "In any attempt by the President to by and take over their industries, the cost to the Government would be equally prohibitive" . . . "If the President tried arbitrarily to commandeer these industries and punish recalcitrant industrialists, resulting chaotic conditions, if not actual sabotage by the owners, would cripple production" . . . "The President is authorized during a declared war to draft into military service all members of the unorganized militia between ages of 21 to 31," and with all the factors in view the local is agin the bill.

Three employes of the Commerce Department leave the service by retirement tomorrow, one having 44 years with the Government to look back on. They are: Nellie G. Ross (Patents), 44 years, eight months' service; Mark Barnum (Secretary's office), 40 years, three months, and Oscar G. Lange (Standards), 35 years, 3 months.

Robert Strople (G. A. O.) writes in: "Over to the G. A. O. clerks in all grades from 1 to 10 are commenting favorably upon the action of Lodge 8, A. F. G. E., in asking the retention of the independence of the General Accounting Office in their resolution to the District Department. Meanwhile, their legislation committee has taken apart the various reorganization bills and has found a great deal which they desire to comment upon at the regular meeting of Lodge 8 on December 6. James G. Yaden, former president of the District Department, will discuss reclassification and classification of both emergency and civil service employes. This subject is very interesting to all G. A. O. employes, since the chances of many of the 2,000 emergency workers of coming into the merit system under noncompetitive examinations is held good."

Mrs. Mary Chapin Burial Set Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Chapin, 73, lifelong resident of Washington, who died yesterday in Garfield Hospital, will be held at 3 p. m. today in Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The Rev. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Chapin was born in Georgetown, the daughter of Joseph E. Libbey, jr., who was in the lumber business. Her husband was Frederick E. Chapin, for many years counselor for the Japanese Embassy. He died in 1923.

She leaves a son, F. J. Chapin; a brother, Robert Libbey, both of Washington, a daughter, Mrs. William C. Meekins, Hendersonville, N. C.; and three grandchildren.

Policeman Birch's Funeral Is Today
